511 SEARS BUILDING,
BOSTON, May 1, 1917.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE CLASS OF EIGHTEEN HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-EIGHT.

THE secretary presents herewith Class Report No. VII. No. VI appeared in 1908. Since then the class has suffered a most serious loss in the death of Joseph C. Whitney in 1911, who had been the secretary since graduation.

The present report is made up in the main from answers to circulars sent out by the secretary in 1914 and 1915. Noticing that in the last Quinquennial Catalogue of the College the rank of the first ten men in each class at graduation was given, it occurred to the secretary that it would be interesting to obtain from the college archives the rank list of the entire class. He accordingly applied for and secured such a list and has had it printed in the report. He has also printed the names of members of the Phi Beta Kappa society from our class. These are the only two novelties.

At the end of the report appear reproductions of recent photographs of such members as were willing to send their pictures to the secretary, also pictures of some deceased members.

In 1914 William Howard Taft, Yale 1878, was elected an honorary member of the class, and it was also voted that the graduates of the Lawrence Scientific School who received the degrees of S.B. in 1878 should be treated in all respects as members of the class. Accordingly they have been invited to attend our dinners and meetings since that date, and we have enjoyed the presence of several of their number.

At Commencement 1912, at the invitation of Hewins, the class dined at his house in Wellesley. In 1913 the members of the class were the guests of the secretary at his house in Boston for the commencement dinner. In 1914 no dinner was had. In 1915 the class dined at the Parker House, and in 1916 they were the guests of the secretary. The regular business meeting has been held on Commencement Day in each year at Stoughton 4.

The Class Committee now consists of N. N. Thayer, Alfred Worcester and Irving Elting.

With the best of good wishes to you all and with the hope that the book will be of interest, the secretary is,

Sincerely your classmate,

HENRY WHEELER.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

CHARLES THORNTON ADAMS continues the practice of the law in New York City. He has been Historian of the Society of the Descendants of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, a Vice-President of that organization, a member of the Harvard Clubs of New York and New Jersey, of the Sons of the Revolution, of the Economic Club, of the Bar Association of the State of New York, and of the New York County Lawyers' Association.

RICHARD SEABROOK ALBERT writes as follows: "After seven years' residence in New York City, where for the greater part of that time I practiced law, I returned to Baltimore in the autumn of 1908. During the spring of 1909 I had a short but most enjoyable association with my old schoolmate, Senator Owen of Oklahoma, for whom I did some work in the libraries in Washington. In June, 1909, I was engaged to reorganize that branch of the Maryland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals which executes the Baltimore city dog law, and I continued to superintend this business until February, 1912, when I withdrew from it on account of the impairment of my wife's health and the necessity of giving closer attention to my private affairs. I have not reopened law offices since my return to Baltimore."

ANDREW HUSSEY ALLEN lived in Cambridge from April, 1908, to April, 1909, then went to Europe, returned to Cambridge in November, 1909, and lived there until November, 1911. Was in England, Wales, and France during 1912. In Washington, D. C., from January to June, 1913, and then returned to Europe. Is a member of the University Club of Washington and of the New Oxford and Cambridge Club (68 Pall Mall) of London.

*WILLIAM ETHAN ALLEN, died at Worcester, Mass., November 7, 1893. (See Secretary's Report, No. IV, p. 17.)

WILLIAM HALL ALLEN writes as follows: "Having sent no data for the last Report, I will go back a little. In November, 1880, I went with A. D. Juilliard & Co. in the dry goods commission business in Worth St., New York City, and stayed with them until February, 1896, when I went into business for myself with B. M. Ewing & Co. of New York City, later having charge of a department with Frederick Viotor & Achelis, also of New York City, until January 1, 1898, when I formed a partnership with John A. Edwards in the cotton converting business at 54 Leonard St., New York City, under the firm name of Edwards & Allen. At first we were very successful, but later, when our partnership expired, we wound up our business in July, 1901. My father having died the month previous (June 17, 1901), I moved to Saybrook, Conn., where for about a year I was busy winding up his estate, and then came back to New York in the general insurance business at 27 William St. in the summer of 1902. My business calling me quite often to Toronto, Canada, I decided to accept the New York agency for Wood, Gundy & Co., a large firm in Toronto, dealing in Canadian municipal bonds, July 1, 1911, representing them exclusively. This business was quite successful, and on July 1, 1913, I resigned my position with them to enlarge my business in other directions, but specializing only in Canadian securities and representing to-day some of the best bond houses of Montreal and Toronto. This is my business to-day, but dealing exclusively in a wholesale way with institutions and banking houses rather than with private investors.

about 1908, a vestryman of Grace Episcopal Church, and was instrumental in organizing Cypress Cemetery Association of Old Saybrook, of which I am still a Trustee.

“ From July, 1883, to October 5, 1895, I was a member of Company K, 7th Regiment, National Guard, State of New York, during all of which time, except the first two years, I was a noncommissioned officer, being honorably discharged as Second Sergeant and one of the ranking sergeants of the regiment. I received the ten-year Cross of Honor from both the regiment and the State of New York for long and faithful service, and declined many offers of commissions in other regiments, one being Captain attached to the Brigade Staff in command of the Signal Corps, and other commissions as Lieutenant in the 8th, 12th, and 71st regiments. Owing to physical disability, caused by typhoid fever (June 20, 1894, to September 10, same year), I was unable to qualify for a commission in the Spanish War, although offered a captaincy in a New York regiment. In fact, it was owing to this alone that I left the National Guard in 1895.

“ Although always an admirer of the fair sex, I have never married, and now care little for ‘ the Society Act ’ (so-called), although my business requires frequent trips to Canada, where I have formed many delightful friendships, as well as here.”

WILLIS BOYD ALLEN has edited an anthology entitled “ The Violet Book ” and published articles and poems in Scribner’s, North American Review, Nation, Lippincott’s, Life, Munsey’s, and other magazines. He writes: “ My life is a very quiet, monotonous one. Stories, poems, essays, published in magazines and papers, fifty or sixty a year; this is all of even nominally permanent (!) value I have to show for my work. A large and varied correspondence is of course a natural corollary to it. Kindly and appreciative letters, with occasionally a savage one, from strangers here or abroad furnish a certain spice to these mild occupations. I think a good deal of the 'boys' of '78 and have just finished reading Jonas Miles' excellent forensic on the single tax."

EDWARD RICHARDSON BACON was at last accounts still a merchant in Chicago.

EDWIN SWIFT BALCH writes as follows: "Since 1908 I have lived most of the time quietly at home in Philadelphia and have done less traveling than formerly. I belong to the same societies and clubs which are mentioned in the last Report, except that I have retired from the Board of Directors and committees of the Franklin Institute. I am also a member of the Association of American Geographers, a member of the Publication Committee of the American Philosophical Society, and a member of the Council of the American Geographical Society.

"During these last six years my activities have taken principally a literary form, and I have published a number of papers. Among them are 'Art in America before the Revolution,' published by the Society of Colonial Wars in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and 'Stonington Antarctic Explorers,' 'Palmer Land,' 'Hudson Land,' and 'Antarctic Names,' published in the Bulletin of the American Geographical Society.

"In 1909 I read a paper. 'Why America Should Pre-explore Wilkes Land,' before the American Philosophical Society. Resolutions were thereupon passed to ask the United States Government to send an expedition. I was made chairman of a committee consisting of Henry G. Bryant, President Geographical Society of Philadelphia; Dr. Hermon C. Bumpus, Director American Museum National History; Professor William Morris Davis; Rear Admiral George W. Melville; Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn, President American Museum National History; and Dr. Charles D. Walcott, Director Smithsonian Institution. The Secretary of the Navy appointed Rear Admiral J. E. Pillsbury to represent the Navy Department. After five months' work, owing to there being no suitable vessel obtainable and the estimated cost, $600,000, it was finally decided by President Taft that it was not advisable at that time to ask Congress for an appropriation. Thus the project fell through, and the discoveries by Admiral Wilkes of the lands known in America collectively as Wilkes Land were verified by an Australian expedition, which has also affixed English names to American discoveries.

"In 1913 I published a little book, 'The North Pole and Bradley Land.' It presents for the first time, and I believe quite accurately, the geographical evidence in regard to the discovery of the North Pole. In brief this is as follows: Cook sailed from Greenland in the middle of August, 1909. The New York Herald published a long cablegram from Cook on September 2, 1909, and beginning September 15 a full narrative. The cablegram was published in New York and the narrative written and sent from Copenhagen before the return of Peary. Now Peary's narrative corroborates in all essentials Cook's narrative. And since the two explorers thus agree so closely about the regions between the shores of Grant Land and the North Pole and about the North Pole itself, and since it is an historic fact that Cook published his narrative first, the only possible deduction is that Cook is the discoverer of the North Pole. My book has been translated into German and was published in 1914 in Germany. So far it has not been answered. Senator Miles Poindexter has taken it for his model in framing a bill which is now before the Senate to recognize Cook as the discoverer.

"I have also continued making a comparative study of the fine arts of all peoples, in all places, and at all times. And I hope at some future day to bring out a revised and enlarged edition of 'Comparative Art,' published in 1906."

WILLIAM AMOS BANCROFT resigned as President of the Boston Elevated Railway Co. in 1916, a position

he had held for many years. He has nine grandchildren. The following, taken from 'Who 's Who,' describes his activities:

CHARLES FOSTER BATCHELDER reports that he has nothing of general interest to add to his biography. He lives in Cambridge and is a student of ornithology and a member of several natural history societies.

WILLIAM ZEBINA BENNETT writes: "In 1908 I met with an unpleasant experience. Some ten years before I had received a severe X-ray burn in the course of some work which I did with X-rays. It never completely healed. Finally it began to break down with apparent threats of becoming malignant. Finally I underwent an operation, quite a slice being taken from my breast. I recovered, but was in rather poor health for a while. In 1909 I was granted a year off and spent most of it in Europe, being gone about fourteen months. Some of the time I spent studying in the Gesundheitsamt and in Emil Fischer's Laboratory in Berlin; also in Paris. I traveled pretty extensively through most of the countries of Europe, returning home in August, 1910.

"Since then my time has been spent uneventfully, teaching chemistry in the University of Wooster. More and more my work has come to be administrative rather than classroom teaching, as I have several men under me, I serving as head of the department. Most of the formal lecturing I do myself. My department has grown enormously and I have excellent laboratories. As the years go by and time advances I think more and more of the old friends and often long for a sight of the face of some Harvard '78 man, though such a sight never comes. I wish that friendships not formed in early life between some of us might be formed and grow strong in our later life until a bond of friendship be established between each one of us and every other."

FREDERIC OGDEN DE BILLIER has been in the Diplomatic Service since 1908. In 1908 and 1909 was Secretary of Legation at Teheran, Persia, and was chargé d'affaires during the revolution and exile of the shah. Was at Athens during Greece's two Balkan wars. He was at Rome, assigned to special duty, during the early part of the European War, and at last accounts was at Lima, Peru.

CHARLES CHAUNCEY BINNEY died at Little Boar's Head, N. H., July 10, 1913. After the close of his duties as an assistant to the Attorney General at Washington and his subsequent employment as special counsel for the Government, during which service he prepared and argued many cases of very great importance in the Court of Claims and in the Supreme Court, he resumed his private practice in Philadelphia until failing health compelled him to cease active work.

EMMONS BLAINE died at Chicago, Ill., June 18, 1892. (See Secretary's Report, No. III, p. 213.)

LAFAYETTE GILBERT BLAIR died December 7, 1912, at his home in Watertown, Mass. He practiced law in Boston ever since his graduation, and his residence was at Watertown. He was a prominent citizen of that place and interested in town affairs. He was also much interested in Freemasonry and attained a high degree in that institution. He was a member of the Boston and Middlesex Bar Associations, the Boston City Club, the Harvard Club of Boston, and an associate member of Edward W. Kinsley Post, G. A. R.

Jamaica Plain, Mass., August 12, 1855. After leaving college he studied at the Harvard Law School, and was in the office of the late William Gaston, Governor of Massachusetts. He was admitted to the Suffolk County Bar in 1882 and practiced law in Boston until his death, devoting himself to conveyancing and probate law. He devoted a great deal of time to genealogical and historical research. He was married on September 30, 1886, at Brookline, to Fannie Lois Clapp. They had one son, who died in infancy. He is survived by his widow.

ARTHUR HENRY BROWN believed to have died many years ago, but the date of his death is unknown.

GEORGE HENRY BROWNE, Principal of Browne and Nichols School of Cambridge, Mass. He writes (1915) as follows: "For ten years (1901-10) Secretary of the New England Association of Teachers of English and editor of its Monthly Leaflets, now (1915) President; First Vice-President of the Harvard Teachers' Association; Second Vice-President of the Old Cambridge Shakespeare Association; member of the Headmasters' Association, Friday Club, and Men's League for Woman Suffrage. Secretary of the Amateur Skating Association of U.S.A., and one of the Board of Governors of the Skating Club of Boston. Frequent judge of American and Canadian championship competitions. Introduced the international style and skate into this country in 1904. Published 'The New Skating,' 1910; 'The Cardinal Positions and Movements in the International School-Figures,' on separate cards, 1911, 2d edition, 1914; 'A Skating Primer,' 1912; 'A Hand Book of Figure Skating,' 4th edition, 1913. Designed 'the most efficient skate ever,' 1914, which Barney & Berry will put on the market for the season of 1915-16.

"In 1905 published a second edition of 'Poems from Writings of Ralph Waldo Emerson' (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.), and in 1907 (2d edition, 1909) 'A Memory Test Latin Word List,' with patented folding device, and a ‘ Vest Pocket Memory Test Note-Book,’ with the same patent folding device, blank (Ginn & Co.). Occasional English leaflets, educational addresses, club papers, and articles on education and winter sport.

“ Irreparable loss in sudden death of Nichols in Paris, in June, 1910. Reorganized and incorporated ‘ The Browne and Nichols School ’ in 1912, with partner Willard Reed (Harv. ’91), for many years a loyal teacher in the school. Equipped Nichols Field, a playground of six acres on the Charles River Parkway, as a memorial to Nichols. The school doubled its size in two years. We are submitting over sixty boys to Harvard examination this year (1915), and next year will send up some of the best material in thirty-three years! What with the telephone, wireless, motor-boat, motor-car, phonograph, motion picture, etc., of the last ten years, conditions for effective teaching were never harder; but with the efficient home coöperation we are now receiving, our material for two or three years (after next year) never looked more promising.”

WILLIAM HENRY BRUNE was Judge of Appeal, Tax Court of Baltimore City, from May 1, 1908, to June 1, 1911, compiler of “ Index of Ordinances and Resolutions of the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, 1797–1906.” Is a member of National Tax Association and Harvard Club of Maryland (President, 1910–11). He writes that “ On leaving the Appeal Tax Court in 1911, I resumed the honorable but not always remunerative practice of the law, and in July of last year I became connected with the State Commission of Maryland, a board created by the Legislature at its 1914 session. Otherwise I have pursued the ‘ noiseless tenor of my way ’ uneventfully and, I hope, harmlessly.”

HOWARD MENDENHALL BUCK writes: “ Nothing has occurred that would interest the class. I have been crossing the Atlantic early in the last five summers, which must be my apology for not attending Commencement.”

STEPHEN BULLARD died at his home in Boston, September 29, 1909. He had been an invalid for many years and unable to attend our class reunions, but he always took a keen interest in what we were doing, in the affairs of the college, and in the general news of the activities of the world, in which he was unable to take part. He was generous to those in distress and a true and loyal friend.

HERBERT CHANNING BURDETT died at Buffalo, N. Y., April 10, 1891. (See Secretary's Report, No. III, p. 32.)

CHARLES ABERNETHY CATLIN died in 1909. The Secretary has no other information about him.

EUGENE TYLER CHAMBERLAIN writes: "My work has been substantially along the same lines as heretofore. On December 1, 1913, I completed twenty years as Commissioner of Navigation. President Cleveland, by whom I was appointed, of course I knew quite well while he was Governor in Albany. Three of the Presidents — Roosevelt, Taft, and Wilson — were in college while we were. I was instrumental in organizing the International Conference on Safety of Life at Sea, which was in part a result of the loss of the S. S. Titanic, and I attended the conference at London from November 12, 1913, to January 21, 1914, as one of the delegates from the United States.

"I am a member of the Metropolitan Club (Washington), the Loyal Legion, a local tennis club, Vice-President of the Washington Whist Club, a member of the Society of Radio Engineers (on account of my office work with wireless on ships, etc.), and some years ago the American Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers made me an Honorary Associate Member. Am member also of the American Maritime Law Association (by courtesy), am also a member of the League of the Good Shepherd, a Catholic organization, and, of course, of the local Harvard Club. These will serve to show my interests outside of office work. My real interest, however, is in a little nephew and namesake in Baltimore (aet. $6\frac{1}{2}$ years), for whom I predict a brilliant career at Harvard in the class of 1930."

CHARLES FREDERIC CHAMBERLAYNE died from accidental drowning on May 13, 1913, near Schenectady, N. Y., which was then his home. He had recently completed a book on the law of evidence in four volumes, the last of which has been published since his death.

EDWARD CHANNING, McLean Professor of Ancient and Modern History at Harvard, has published further volumes of his "History of the United States." He is a member of the Massachusetts Historical Society, the National Institute of Arts and Letters, the American Antiquarian Society, the Colonial Club of Cambridge, and the Cosmos Club of Washington.

He writes: "The humdrum life of a professor is much the same from year to year. Boys look alike to Alma Mater, although to their own maters they seem very different. They are splendid fellows that we have and appreciative of the efforts of yours truly. I give them American history by the decade. They take it in, give some of it to their fathers, remember a little, and forget the rest; but some of them have learned how to read and some have learned a little something as to how to use their brains. Otherwise they have made pleasant and useful acquaintances and have developed their bodies. These are the undergraduates. I have also had a constant stream of graduates, mostly from other pedagogical institutions. I am ambitious to turn out a few literary historians, but these graduates persist, for the most part, in wanting to be fitted for teaching jobs in colleges and universities throughout the country.

"Apart from the pedagogical side, I have tried to do some writing and am perpetrating upon an unsuspecting and trustful world a 'History of the United States' in eight volumes, some of which you have apparently read, or, rather I should say or meant to say, you had not read, because in your late communication you spoke of this work as entertaining. My idea in writing it was to place before serious-minded persons and students, who have no option, the results of the investigations of American historical students into our history, including my own, and to put this in such form that the aforesaid serious minded could read it without too great effort. As the thing has turned out, it seems to be regarded as a sort of standby by fellow teachers of history throughout the country in universities and colleges. They give it out by chapters and volumes to the helpless. I have published three volumes of this work and am now laboring over the fourth. There are to be eight in all, if life and vigor permit, coming down to 1900.

“I have also written sundry textbooks. One of these is entitled ‘First Lessons in United States History.’ It was designed for the small fry, but has proved to be of use to visiting European professors and lecturers in the Lowell Institute, who absorb it bodily and pour out little anecdotes about Franklin, Washington, and Lincoln to their admiring hosts and hostesses on Beacon Street and elsewhere. I have written a ‘History of the United States, 1765 to 1865,’ for the particular edification of the people of Great Britain, it being published by Cambridge University. It has done some good in England, but not as much as hoped for, probably not as much as the ‘First Lessons.’ It has been translated into Russian and Japanese and adapted by the Germans, carefully omitting what was not desirable. In Russia it became an instrument of revolution. I have also written a ‘Students’ History of the United States’ which has been studied by hundreds of thousands of American boys and girls and has contributed largely to the ease and comfort of your classmate and his family. I have had sabbaticals and semi-sabbaticals, have been to Europe, and seen America, or a large part of it.”

GEORGE LOCKE CHENEY is Vice-President of the Middlesex Hospital of Middletown, Conn., and of the Charity Organization Society of New York. He is President and Treasurer of Pratt, Read & Co. and of the Pratt, Read Player Action Co. of Deep River, Conn., President and Director of Wasle & Co. of New York, President and Director of the Essex Light and Power Co. of Essex, Conn., and Vice-President and Director of the Piano & Organ Supply Co. of Chicago.

HERBERT MORISON CLARKE writes: "From 1908 to 1914 I continued to teach modern languages at St. Stephen's College. The last year of that period I was vice-chairman of the Hudson Valley Section of the New York State Modern Language Association. As a rule I spent the long summer vacation in preaching or else attended some vacation school of languages. In 1911 I spent the summer in Germany, attending lectures in the charming old town of Marburg, and visiting friends in several other places.

"In June, 1914, I severed my connection with St. Stephen's. I was planning to go to Italy the following September, but gave it up on account of the war. Since then I have lived a quiet life in Syracuse, preaching from time to time in various churches."

EDWARD HOWARD COBB is a teacher in the English High School of Boston. He is a member of the following organizations: Massachusetts Schoolmasters' Club, New England Association of Colleges and Preparatory Schools, New England History Teachers' Association, Harvard Teachers' Association, New Church Club. He writes: "The school year of 1910 and 1911 I spent in Europe with my family, partly for rest and partly to get more material for my courses in history and to get acquainted with German and Swiss schools."

OSBORNE SARGENT CURTIS, who lives in England, has three children, two sons and a daughter. The sons are both in active service in the British armies, and have both been seriously wounded and recovered from their wounds. The elder son, Harry Osborne Curtis, formerly of King's Royal Rifles, is now on Brigade Major service in Salonika. The younger son, Arthur Randolph Wormeley Curtis, is now detached from the 11th Hussars, of which he is an officer, and is serving in the Royal Flying Corps "somewhere in France." His daughter, Ariana Edith, was married in London in 1912 to Edward Darby Jackson, now Colonel of a Scots Brigade in France.

HOWARD FREEMAN DOANE died very suddenly of pneumonia at his summer home, Oak Bluffs, Mass., September 19, 1913. For the past five summers he had been classical master at the Treat Summer Tutoring School at Oak Bluffs. In 1912 he was engaged by the Century Co. on their small dictionary. Never very robust, he did not take up institutional work after he resigned from Doane College of Crete, Neb., where he had been Professor of Greek and Latin from 1885 to 1904. He was at the American School at Athens, 1895-96, and at Rome, 1911-12.

PHILIP VAN RENSSELAER ELY sends no report. He lives in Boston, was a stock broker for many years, but is now out of business.

FREDERICK LEWIS GAY died at his home in Brookline, Mass., March 3, 1916. He was the son of Dr. George H. Gay of the class of 1842 and was born in Boston October 28, 1856. He was fitted for college at the Boston Latin School and entered college in 1874, but left in February, 1878, without taking a degree. He devoted some time to the study of medicine after leaving college and then was engaged for a time in business in Chicago. He gave up active business many years ago and devoted himself to historical investigation. Early voyages to America, the early history of the American Colonies, and the relations of the Colonies to Great Britain were the subjects to which he gave special attention, and he wrote many articles on antiquarian subjects for periodicals. He received his degree of A.B. from the University in 1903 and was made a member of the Massachusetts Historical Society in 1915. He had served as President of the Prince Society, was Registrar of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts, Director of the Bunker Hill Monument Association, a member of the American Antiquarian Society, the Club of Odd Volumes, the Dedham, Brookline, and Marblehead Historical Societies, was a Trustee of the Brookline Public Library, and a member of the Somerset, Tavern, Eastern Yacht, and other clubs. ZEBINA ALLSTON GLEASON is now living at Callexico, Cal.

HENRY GOLDMARK writes as follows: "Since 1908 I have been, till quite recently, in the employ of the Isthmian Canal Commission. In the summer of 1908 I spent some weeks in Europe, partly for pleasure, partly in order to gather information regarding important lands and harbor works, for use in connection with the Panama work. Since October, 1908, I have been living on the Canal Zone, engaged as Designing Engineer of the Commission, in charge of the preparation of designs and the execution of same for various parts of the Panama Canal. My work included, besides smaller investigations, the construction of the gates for all locks, the protective chains and floating caissons, also the pontoon railroad bridge, just put into service as a permanent crossing over the Canal. It was my privilege to have as my guest on the Isthmus our classmate Dr. Potter and his son.

"Having completed all the work assigned to my department, I resigned from the government service April 15, 1914, and have recently returned to the United States to resume the practice of my profession. I have retained my connection with certain works in Canada still incomplete, my brother Charles being in direct charge of same.

"Am a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Institution of Civil Engineers (London), the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers, and other secular associations."

AUGUSTUS COE GURNEE sends no report.

CHARLES ALBERT HAMILTON sends the following: "Since 1908 I have been steadily grinding away in the educational mill known as Boys' High School of Brooklyn. I have been interested more or less in various 'ologies and 'osophies not strictly in the syllabus prescribed, and have at times attempted to impart some practical information as to what to study and how to study to the horde of boys who have come under my care.

"As I grow older and associate more with my son, who is now an electrical engineer and instructor at Columbia University, I realize that my general college course in Latin, Greek, and a little mathematics could have been limited to one year and that I could then have devoted myself to my specialty for the other three years of the course. I should like to be an engineer, probably electrical or mechanical. I advise my boys in school to cut short their academic college course and specialize before it is too late.

"I think I have a 'call' to preach the gospel of health to men, women, and children. Accordingly after I retire from B. H. S. on half pay I propose to devote some time to establishing a camp for boys where bookworms can be taught to crawl out of their books and pay some attention to swimming, paddling, tennis, and baseball. Not only shall they be taught the value and necessity of the simple life in the open, but they shall learn to use their hands in making things and their brains in planning what to make. They shall learn to enjoy life and see the beauty in sunset and mountain and lake as well as learn to study books. The book called 'The Master of the Inn,' by Robert Herrick (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York), made a profound impression on my mind; and if I could afford it, I would send a copy to every member of '78 and compel him to read it.

There are, however, many hopeful signs of improvement. I belong to the Appalachian Mountain Club, a tennis club, a golf club, and a bowling club. I still play singles, though my son no longer fears my service. I have just taken up bowling and hope to learn the fox trot this winter.

LEWIS HANCOCK reports as follows: “I am still connected with the State National Bank and have also engaged in developing real estate in Austin, Tex. I went to Europe in the summer of 1912 and again in 1914, where I had the ill luck to be caught, with my wife and daughters, by the outbreak of the war. We experienced most of the anxieties and difficulties suffered by all Americans in Europe at that time, but finally succeeded in reaching London, thanks to the activities of the American diplomatic representatives in Paris and Switzerland. My clubs are the Country Club in Austin and the University Club in New York.”

BENJAMIN FOSDICK HARDING has been Senior Master of Milton Academy of Milton, Mass., since 1914. He has published in the magazine Education the articles on “Secondary School Education” and “A Secondary School Curriculum;” also a translation into Latin verse of Longfellow’s “Psalm of Life.”

JOHN BUTTERWORTH HARDING writes: “Since the date of the last Report nothing noteworthy has happened in my life save the finishing of our parish church, which is pronounced a fine specimen of perpendicular Gothic. It cost $175,000. It is paid for and consecrated. A few years ago I spent, with my family, six months in travel in Europe. For four sessions I have been a delegate to the General Convention. I am a trustee of the diocese, a manager of the Episcopal Hospital, and a member of the Church Building Commission. When not occupied in parish routine, I get a change through my membership in the Clericus, the Union League, the Inglenook, and the Checker Club."

CHARLES HARRINGTON died September 11, 1908. He was at the time Secretary of the State Board of Health of Massachusetts. That Board adopted the following minute to commemorate his services:

"Dr. Charles Harrington, Secretary of this Board, died suddenly in Lynton, England, while absent on his vacation. He was elected Secretary in December, 1904, and until his death performed the responsible duties pertaining to that office in an efficient and intelligent manner, and fully maintained the high standard set by his predecessors.

"Thirty years ago, while a student in the Medical School, he decided to devote his life to preventive medicine, and during that time he steadfastly pursued the course which he had marked out so early in his career. At this time few, even among physicians, recognized that preventive medicine was a subject worthy the entire attention of a man seeking to be useful in the practice of medicine, and it was with surprise that his classmates learned that so bright and able a man had made such a choice. When he was elected Secretary of this Board, he first found an opportunity to make full use of the knowledge in hygiene that he had acquired by so many years of study, and he soon showed that the State had secured a very capable official who had the ability and knowledge to interpret wisely and enforce the laws that protect and safeguard the health of the people.

"Although his death was premature and the next ten years should have been the most fruitful of his life, he already had shown that his choice of preventive medicine was wise, and that in no other way, probably, could he have done so much good and useful work.

"Dr. Harrington's personality was pleasing and genial; his sense of humor was keen and contagious; his discrimination between right and wrong was intuitive and accurate; his scorn for all that was mean was prompt and fine. For these qualities, and for his services to the community, he was respected by all and loved by his friends."

MELVIN HASBROUCK died at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., March 11, 1879. (See Secretary's Report, No. II, p. 39.)

EDWARD ROGERS HASTINGS reports nothing additional.

HENRY CLINTON HAY writes: "Since the last Report in 1908 I have continued in the office of associate pastor of the Boston Society of the New Jerusalem Church at 136 Bowdoin St., opposite the State House, Boston; and I have become senior editor of the New Church Review (quarterly), which always contains editorials, and sometimes extended articles, from my pen. For a number of years I have served as Secretary of the Board of Managers of the New Church Theological School, Quincy St., Cambridge, and have also served constantly on its Board of Visitors. My home continues to be at Brookline in the winter and at Bridgeton, Me., in the summer. In the summer of 1908 Mrs. Hay and I enjoyed travel in England, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, and France."

PARKE WOODBURY HEWINS was born in Lawrence, Mass., May 19, 1855, and lived in Lawrence till July, 1866, when his family moved to Taunton, Mass., where he fitted for college at the Taunton High School. In the fall of 1878 he entered the Harvard Medical School, and on completing the three years' course there passed a year as house officer at the Boston City Hospital and then took his degree of M.D. in the year 1883. He began the practice of medicine in Boston in the office of Dr. John G. Blake, but very soon received a proposition from an old Harvard graduate — Dr. Geo. M. Staples, '55 — to go to Dubuque, Ia., and become a physician in that city. After trying life in the West for ten months, he decided to return to Taunton, his home city, and settle there permanently.

Although hitherto a Republican in politics, he now became strongly interested in the election of Grover Cleveland and was a delegate to the Chicago Convention that gave President Cleveland his nomination for his second election. In the spring of 1887 President Cleveland appointed him United States Pension Examining Surgeon on the Taunton Board, which position he retained till 1894. Later the free silver oratory drove him back into the Republican ranks, where he has been perfectly content to remain.

Soon after his return to Taunton, family interests persuaded him to engage in the cotton business, and he was elected Treasurer of the Hopewell Cotton Mills in 1885, and for four years divided his time between his medical profession and the manufacture of cotton jeans and sateens.

By 1889 the cotton mill interest had gradually evolved into a local real estate investment business, which later extended to Boston, then Providence, R. I., and then again to Sioux City, Ia., Muncie, Ind., and Duluth, Minn.

In 1891, two years later, he was compelled, on account of illness, to give up all business care, and take a six months' trip in Europe. The change and rest improved his health and he resumed work on his return. On June 6, 1895, he married Miss Jessie M. Warner of Lockport, N. Y., and went to live in Duluth, Minn., where he remained four years, attending to the various interests of his company in that city. While in Duluth, on August 24, 1896, his only child, a daughter, Elizabeth Lottie, was born, who at the present writing, June, 1915, has just completed her freshman year at Vassar College.

The climate of northern Minnesota, however, brought back his old troubles, and he returned East and settled in Brookline, Mass., for three years. Finally, advised by his physicians to choose a real country home, he went to Wellesley Hills, bought eight acres of land, and built the home where he now lives. His time is chiefly occupied as President and Director of the Massachusetts Real Estate Company and Treasurer and Director of the Boston Investment Company — two companies of which he was one of the original incorporators in 1886. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Old Colony Historical Society of Taunton, Mass., a life member of the American Unitarian Association, and the Unitarian Sunday School Society, the Harvard Club of Boston, and the Wellesley Country Club of Wellesley.

JOHN RUSSELL HOLMES writes: "Have practiced law uneventfully since above date (April, 1908) till January 1, 1914, when I accepted an appointment as Director of Public Safety of Cincinnati. I am still in office."

Is a member of the following clubs: University Club of Cincinnati, Country Club of Cincinnati, Cincinnati Golf Club, Commercial Club of Cincinnati, Blaine Club of Cincinnati, Harvard Club of New York.

CHARLES WELLS HUBBARD writes: "The summers of 1908 and 1912 I spent abroad. In the summer of 1909, with my son, I joined a camping party in the Rocky Mountains. As treasurer of the school and chairman of the building committee, I have been much interested in the incorporation of The Winsor School, a girls' private day school, and in the building of its beautiful schoolhouse on Pilgrim Road, Longwood. Since retiring from active business I have occupied part of my time in perfecting an invention in spinning and twisting. The principle involved is entirely new and has been patented in the United States, England, and France. While operating successfully, the machine has not yet been put to the test of practical mill operation."

After having been Treasurer of the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates for twenty-five years he retired from active business.

EDWARD BROWNE HUNT died February 9, 1906. (See Secretary's Report, No. VI, p. 40.)

ERNEST JACKSON died in Boston, Mass., February 27, 1913. He devoted his life to teaching, being connected with different private schools in Boston and its vicinity, and also doing much work as a private tutor. He was greatly interested in archæological research and made a large collection of interesting articles in that connection. In 1895 he was chosen Secretary of the Boston Society of the Archæological Institute of America. He was unmarried.

LAWRENCE JACOB writes as follows: "Since the last Class Report I have divided my time uneventfully between my home in New York City and a summer place in the opulent sounding but really very primitive hamlet of Diamond Point, Lake George, N. Y. I have discovered that a man out of business may be without the shackles of office hours, but that he need never be idle so long as his relatives have anything to be done, nor so long as the charitable and other societies in his neighborhood are looking for useful men to put on their executive committees. The life of an active retired business man seems, however, to agree with me. I have most of the hair, all of the teeth, and a great deal more of the figure than I could boast of at graduation."

for comment even in such a personal history as a class report. I have traveled across the continent several times within that period, partly on business and partly for pleasure. On three different occasions I have been the guest of our classmate Frank I. Kendall, at San Diego, Cal. I have gradually retired from active professional work and have resigned my membership in the Massachusetts Historical Society and some other organizations. For several years past I have been President of the Board of Trustees of the Woburn Public Library and Vice-President of the Woburn National Bank. I am a member of the law firm of Johnson & Johnson, which is made up of my brother, myself, and our two sons — all Harvard men."

JOSEPH FRENCH JOHNSON sends the following: "Since April, 1908, I have been very busy running the New York University School of Commerce, the growth of which has surpassed all expectations. Last year there were over twenty-seven hundred students in attendance. The school is divided into departments, each of which in itself is almost an individual school. For instance, we have the Departments of Journalism, Accounting, Advertising, Finance, Public Affairs. It goes without saying that I am watching with interest and pride the good work being done by the Graduate School of Business Administration at Cambridge.

"In 1912 I was a member of Mayor Gaynor's Commission on New Sources of Revenue for New York City, and in 1913 I served on the Van Tuyl Commission to Revise the Banking Law of the State of New York. The report of this commission was adopted with very little change by the Legislature. I am a director of the Merchants' Association of New York City and am chairman of the Committee on Finance and Taxation. I was member of a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America which succeeded in persuading the Senate Committee on Finance to make several important changes in the bill which finally became the Federal Reserve Act. In 1909 I visited Canada at the request of the National Monetary Commission and wrote a monograph on the Canadian banking system. The same year I assisted in the foundation of the Alexander Hamilton Institute and edited a set of twelve texts, covering the important subjects included in our School of Commerce curriculum. The Institute is not a correspondence school; its aim is to direct the reading of young business men and to awaken in them a desire to study and understand business problems. It has now about thirty thousand subscribers in all parts of the country, and I am proud of its good work. Of course I give very little attention to the details of its management, being satisfied to know, as a director of the corporation, that the men in charge are competent, sincere, and honest. Of course I have written articles and made speeches galore, but they had best be forgotten. If any of the fellows who do not know anything about banking would care to read my opinion of the Federal Reserve Act, I should be happy to send them a copy of the speech I delivered before the Economic Club in November, 1913."

WALTER KESSLER writes as follows: "In 1909 I sold my interest in Indianapolis Drop Forging Co., of which I was President. In 1910, Ramona Stone Co., of which I was President and Manager, discontinued operations. Since then I have had no regular business occupation."

PHILIP COOMBS KNAPP writes: "Since the last Report I have continued to lead my usual life practicing medicine here in Boston, without any extraordinary events. I have occasionally seen alleged portraits of myself in the newspapers in connection with some murder trial, fortunately not as the defendant, which were not flattering and I trust not a good resemblance.

My travels in the last few years have not been extensive and have been limited to this section of the country. I have published a good many articles in different medical journals, which have been wholly of special character, and a fourth edition of the translation of Strümpell's 'Textbook of Medicine,' which Vickery and I did so many years ago. To this I added a section on mental diseases. In 1908 I became a Fellow of the Royal Society of Medicine by virtue of my membership in the Neurological Society of the United Kingdom, being enrolled in both the neurological and psychiatric sections of the Royal Society. I have also since 1908 become a member of the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology and of the American Association of Medical Jurisprudence, being a Vice-President of the latter society. In 1914 I was President of the Alumni Association of the Boston City Hospital, presiding at its annual dinner on the occasion of the semi-centennial of the hospital. In 1913 I resigned from the position of instructor in the Harvard Medical School after twenty-five years' service. I am a member of the St. Botolph and University Clubs here in Boston.

"My investigation in regard to the success in later life of the first scholars at Harvard, soon to appear in the Graduates' Magazine, has brought out some rather interesting facts about the class of '78, more suitable perhaps for the modest seclusion of a class report than for the greater publicity of the magazine, especially since we have always been modest and retiring. My investigation was for the purpose of determining how many men were sufficiently successful in later life to be mentioned in 'Who's Who' in America. Somewhat to my surprise I found that '78 had the largest percentage of members mentioned in that work of any class since '69, and the largest percentage of any class, from 1851 to 1900, who had as many as a hundred members living when they began to publish the book. It is plain even to my unmathematical mind that, if a class has only twenty or thirty men living after 1895, when 'Who's Who' began to take account of persons of note, a single noteworthy person would stand for a much larger percentage than five or six such persons in a class of the size of '78, so that the percentages of the classes in the first and second decades of the period I studied (1851 to 1900) have an unduly high percentage of distinguished men. It may be that there are men in the class who still have mathematics enough to work out these percentages on a sounder basis. I never had much, and what I have left, unoxidized, is just enough to enable me to add, subtract, multiply, and divide in small amounts and to do apothecaries' weight."

The article above referred to appeared in the Harvard Graduates' Magazine for March, 1916, p. 597.

ROSEWELL BIGELOW LAWRENCE sends the following: "I continue to be one of the Trustees of Tufts College and a member of the Executive Committee. Tufts College honored me with the degree of Master of Arts in 1908. I ceased to be a member of the Medford School Committee in 1910, having served eighteen years, sixteen and a half as chairman. I left the local Park Committee in 1910 after seventeen years' service. I am still Secretary of the Appalachian Mountain Club and also chairman of the Scholarship Committee of the Medford Club of Harvard University. Allow me to add Vice-President of the Mystic Valley Harvard Club, an organization of occasional activity, and President of the Medford Boys' Club, an organization of continuous activity. I have continued my travels, having visited Panama and the Caribbean in 1908, Scandinavia in 1909, Germany in 1911, and England in 1913."

The Secretary regrets to have to state that for some months previous to the issue of this Report Lawrence has been suffering from a severe illness.

JOHN CLARENCE LEE writes the following: "I have now spent fifteen busy and happy years in Philadelphia as the pastor of the Universalist Church of the Restoration, situated on Master St., below 17th St.; and I can truthfully testify that the work of the Christian ministry is fruitful of joy and satisfaction. It is my good fortune to have a congregation of intelligent and responsive people, who show their faith by their works; and my wife has been my best helper, rendering invaluable assistance in all of our religious and philanthropic undertakings.. It is my great privilege to preach the cheerful gospel of God's universal love and the final triumph of good over evil, and to apply these principles to human lives.

"My oldest son graduated from Harvard in 1912; the four younger children, two of whom were born in Philadelphia, are still pursuing their education. We have spent most of our summers at Green Harbor, Mass., but have at times found our recreation in travel. In 1910 I made my third trip to Europe, accompanied by my wife and three of our children. We saw the impressive Passion Play at Oberammergau and many of the finest things in seven of the lands of Europe. I walked over the Gemmi Pass and had that splendid view from the top of Gorner Grat. In 1907 the Universalist General Convention met in my church; this was the largest convention ever held by this denomination. In 1909 I gave the Commencement address at Lombard College (in which I was formerly a professor). In 1913 I published in the Universalist Leader a history of 'The Beginning of St. Lawrence University' (the first President of which was my late father, John S. Lee, D.D., LL.D.). Various sermons and addresses of mine have been printed in papers, but no books. I belong to the Union League, the City Club, and the Browning Society of Philadelphia. The friendship of my Harvard classmates, especially of the four or five men who cordially welcomed me when I joined the class in September, 1877, has been to me a life-long pleasure."

LUCIUS NATHAN LITTAUER reports as follows:
“1912, February. Was elected by the Legislature Regent of the University of the State of New York.

“1908 and 1912. Was elected delegate to National Republican conventions (from the Twenty-fifth New York Congressional District). Have continuously headed the delegations from Fulton and Hamilton counties at Republican State conventions, including 1914.

“Business connections: Littauer Brothers, New York and Gloversville, owner; Metropolitan Sewing Machine Co., Nyack, N. Y., owner; Fonda Glove Lining Co., President; Gloversville Knitting Co., President; Glen Telephone Co., Vice-President; Monroe Eckstein Brewing Co., Treasurer; the State Bank, New York, Director; Fulton County National Bank, Gloversville, Director; Fulton County Gas & Electric Co., Director; Central Hudson Steamboat Co., Director; McIntyre Iron Co., Director; Glove Manufacturers Association, President; Nathan Littauer Hospital, Gloversville, chairman.

“Since my retirement from the United States Congress I have continued in active participation of public affairs. In 1908 I took an active part in support of President Roosevelt's determination not to be a candidate again for the Presidency; though strong in opposition to his determination to nominate Taft. Senator Lodge presided at the National Republican Convention, where the program we had worked on together was completely successful, including the nomination of my intimate friend, James S. Sherman, as Vice-President. Upon the outcome of this convention I was generally congratulated especially by Senator Lodge. In the fall of 1909, at the request of Speaker Cannon, I took charge of the movement to reelect him Speaker. In 1912, at the request of Theodore Roosevelt, I was earliest in the movement to prevent the renomination of Taft, and later to nominate Roosevelt. I was a substitute member of the National Republican Committee whose action arbitrarily unseated delegates elected for Roosevelt and which made Taft's renomination possible. I refused to join in the subsequent formation of the Progressive Party and ceased political activity. As one intimately connected with the event, I am positive in the conviction that the Republican Convention of 1912 was prevented from nominating Roosevelt by his own actions after he reached Chicago, guided by the advice of the 'extreme' element among his following, who sought a split in the party for their own ends — in opposition to those of us who were seeking Roosevelt's nomination to end Taft's constantly changing principles and vacillating methods, to regenerate the Republican Party, and for the development into legislation of the social and industrial betterment program for which Roosevelt stood. In February, 1912, I was elected Regent of the University of the State of New York and devoted considerable time and much work to the duties of the position, from which I resigned in February, 1914. Freedom from public office has permitted greater devotion to developing varied business interests, particularly the Glen Telephone Co., the Metropolitan Sewing Machine Co., and the Fonda Glove Lining Co. In July, 1913, I was married to Flora M. Crawford. My New York City residence is 64 West 87th St., where members of our class will always find a hearty welcome. After a most distressing experience in connection with the smuggling of an article of personal adornment, wherein I sought to shield another, I suffered a general nervous collapse (my first illness since college days), but a successful operation gradually restored health and vigor. I do not play golf or take any regular exercise, but I do motor and have spent my vacations in recent years over the roads of Europe and North Africa, an unequaled method of healthful diversion and mental rest."

WARREN PLIMPTON LOMBARD writes that he has published "The Blood Pressure in the Arterioles, Capillaries, and Small Veins of the Human Skin," an article in the American Journal of Physiology, vol. xxix, 1912, p. 335, and has given a number of addresses. He has been President of the Research Club of the University of Michigan and is one of the secretaries of the International Congress of Physiologists, representing America. He says: "My life has been the uneventful life of the college professor — very interesting to me and very happy."

AUGUSTUS PEABODY LORING writes: "I have given my work strict attention, which consists of an office practice in corporation and probate law and management of corporations and estates. I have five grandchildren and do some farming and sailing for recreation, and walking and play racquetts for exercise. I am listed in the 'Directory of Directors' as follows: Albany Trust, Trustee; Allegheny Coke Co., President and Director; Baush Machine Tool Co., President and Director; Beacon Chambers Trust, Trustee; Bedford Trust, Trustee; Beverly Hospital Corporation, Treasurer; Butterfield & Co., Director; Journal Building Trust, Trustee; L. The next year he was house physician of the Worcester City Hospital, and the following year (1885) he went to Newport and engaged in the general practice of medicine, which he continued until he died. He was State Examiner of Medicine for Newport County from 1889 to 1895, city physician of Newport in 1892, and a member of the medical staff of the Newport Hospital from 1893 until his death. He was President of the Medico-Legal Society in 1893 and 1894. In January, 1887, he married Miss Ellen G. Bailey of Middletown, who survives him with three daughters.

HARRY WHITE MASON sends no report.

JULIAN AUGUSTUS MEAD was born April 15, 1856, at West Acton, Mass. He prepared for college at Phillips

Academy, Exeter, received the degree of A.B. from Harvard in 1878 and of M.D. from Harvard in 1881. From the summer of 1881 till the fall of 1883 he spent the time in Europe, studying medicine at Vienna, Leipzig, and Paris.

In November, 1883, he settled in Watertown, Mass., and began the general practice of medicine. He occupied a small house next to the residence of Dr. Alfred Hosmer, with whom he associated intimately and whom he admired for his strong character and professional ability. In December, 1889, he married Mary Dearborn Emerson, who survives him. He died unexpectedly, after a brief illness, March 30, 1913.

His first medical appointment came to him in less than six months after he began practice, when in March, 1884, he became medical examiner. This position he occupied three terms, i.e., twenty-one years. In the same month, March, 1884, he was appointed Assistant Surgeon of the Fifth Infantry, M. V. M. He was chairman of the Watertown Board of Health from 1895 to 1898. On April 1, 1891, he was made Post Surgeon of the Watertown United States Arsenal. In 1895 Governor Greenhalge appointed him a member of the State Board of Health. Both of these positions he held till his death. In 1900 he was President of the Massachusetts Medico-Legal Society. He was Visiting Physician at the Perkins Institution for the Blind.

This enumeration indicates his professional interests in their official relations. He found pleasure in the acquaintances and friendships which they brought to him. His greatest satisfaction, however, he felt in daily practice among his townspeople. His own words were: "I would rather practice medicine than do anything else." He enjoyed studying the individual's peculiarities as well as his disease.

He early took a lively interest in the public affairs of the town, and with him that meant active participation. For years he was a factor to be reckoned with in town meetings. His activity led a cautious friend to expostulate with him and to warn him that he was likely to incur unpopularity and consequently to lose favor and practice. His reply was, "I'll be a man first and then a doctor."

That he embodied this principle in his daily life, that the well-rounded physician does not devote himself exclusively to medicine, is evidenced by the many lines of service to which he gave himself. For nine years he was chairman of the School Board (1886-95), was Selectman from 1899 to 1901, was Trustee of the Free Public Library and for a time the Secretary of the Board. He was long connected with the Watertown Savings Bank, beginning in 1888 as corporator, later, March, 1895, as Trustee, filling in 1898 and 1899 a vacancy as Treasurer, and its President since 1899.

Dr. Mead was a delightful companion. His genial nature was apparent in his face and voice. His greeting was hearty and cordial. In writing he had the ability to express a pleasant thought in pleasing words, and his brief letters sparkled with vivacity.

He was a good host. In the early years he entertained in bachelor fashion in the small, simply furnished house which he first occupied. Here the Clover Club met, a group of three friends, afterwards four, who met regularly for the discussion of medical subjects. In later years, with Mrs. Mead, he entertained more sumptuously, and always with unaffected hospitality.

By his death we suffer the loss of a man of sterling character, an honored practitioner, and a loyal citizen.

JONAS MICHAEL MILES writes as follows: "In 1912 I let my Concord house and built a smaller one, in which I now live, on Adams Street, Brookline. In 1910 I printed a paper on 'Taxation of Land Values in Massachusetts,' the gist of it being that the basis of taxation ought to be what society does for the individual, and not (as now) what one does for society and for himself.

Since then I have talked about it in various places. I am a member of the Twentieth Century Club, Boston; New England Historic Genealogical Society, Boston; Executive Committee, Massachusetts Single Tax League. Since May, 1914, I have lectured in various places on taxation, and have lately published a sixteen page pamphlet, 'Ground Rent and Taxes.' I am now compiling a 'Miles Genealogy.' "

EDWARD COOK MOORE, JR., writes from New York as follows: "I would like to write an interesting account of my life since 1908 for your Report. About all you could report is that I have gone along as per last Report. Still free from wife, authorship, and public office, not practicing my profession, but still unable to escape from the duties and responsibilities of my office, and leading a quiet and uneventful existence in this quiet little town."

JOHN HOLMES MORISON died at Boston, Mass., January 30, 1911, after a long illness. He gave up the active practice of the law some years before his death and lived a life of retirement from active business. He was much interested in his old family home at Peterborough, N. H., which became his legal residence. He was of scholarly tastes, a lovable disposition, and much personal charm. He is survived by his widow and two sons, of which the eldest, Samuel E. Morison of the class of 1906, is an historical scholar and writer of distinction.

EDWARD WILSON MORSE writes the following: "In 1910 I retired from the publishing house of Charles Scribner's Sons in order to devote myself to literary work. In the next few years I wrote a book, 'Causes and Effects in American History: The Story of the Origin and Development of the Nation,' which was published by the Scribners in 1913. In Scribner's Magazine for June, 1914, I published a story, 'The Trick of the Voice,' and the leisure that goes with retirement has enabled my wife and myself to pass two winters in Egypt and Italy in recent years. Ordinarily, however, we are in New York in the winter and in Nantucket in the summer. Most of my time indoors is spent in the library of the University Club or of the Century Club, with an occasional visit to the Harvard Club. In the summer my catboat and my wife's flower garden keep me busy. In my wife's opinion I am a better boatman than a gardener."

HERBERT FLOYD WILLIS MORSE writes that there has been nothing eventful in his life to report. He is a merchant at Portland, Me.

JOHN ARCHIBALD MURRAY sends the following: "Since 1908 I have continued the practice of the law in New York City. About that year the firm with which I am connected changed its name from Zabriskie, Burrill & Murray to Zabriskie, Murray, Sage & Kerr, at the same time taking into partnership Dean Sage (a Harvard Law School graduate), Albert B. Kerr, and Henry G. Gray (Harvard A.B., LL.B.). Since that date there has been no change in the personnel of my firm. Besides the Bar Association, I belong to the Union Club, Knickerbocker Club, Riding Club, Down Town Association, Piping Rock Club, and Garden City Golf Club. I might also mention the Tobique (N. B.) Salmon Club."

GEORGE WILLIAM NASH sends the following: "In this quiet village of Hurley, N. Y., my life has been for a number of years and still is an uneventful one. I am enjoying to the utmost the 'simple life' in the country, and find it harder every year to realize the beauty of city life. Perhaps a happy combination of the two would be ideal.

"With memories of Freeman's 'Outlines of History' ever in mind, I smile as I realize how interesting history may be, especially the local history about one's home. The local history of this section is an especially interesting one, and in this direction and in hunting for relics and antiques my life is very much occupied. A few articles along these lines have been printed in various magazines, 'Olde Vlster' being especially referred to. An amateur knowledge of photography has aided me very much in both the above-mentioned lines, and as a result I have thus collected and preserved hundreds of photographs of everything pertaining to the early life of the people of the country. It is not so much the political history, but the personal or life actions, that interest me.

"My only office has been and still is that of the clerk to the district school. In politics I am a Democrat.

"My only club affiliations are with the City History Club of New York City. Perhaps the classmate with whom I have had the most acquaintance is the Rev. W. J. Oliver of York, Pa. In this section Harvard men are very few, Rutgers College being the institution that has the hold on the section."

HENRY SYLVESTER NASH died at Cambridge, Mass., November 6, 1912, after an illness of about a year. He was born at Newark, Ohio, on December 23, 1854, entered the sophomore class at Harvard in 1875, and after graduating in 1878 he entered the Episcopal Theological School, from which he graduated in 1881, having interrupted his course there to devote one year to teaching at De Veaux College in New York. He was ordained in 1881 and took charge of a mission church in Waltham, was appointed instructor in the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge in 1882, and Professor of the Literature and Interpretation of the New Testament in 1883, a position he held until his death. His principal published works are, "The Genesis of the Social Conscience," "Ethics and Revelation," and "The Atoning Life." He was an original thinker, an impressive preacher, and took an intense interest in humanity. His friends were many and warm, and the respect and esteem in which he was held by his professional brethren was shown at his funeral, which was attended by a throng of the most eminent clergymen in eastern Massachusetts.

A writer in the New York Evening Post of November 23, 1912, speaks of him as follows:

"I suppose that no one has ever had warmer friends than this man. Yet no matter how close the relationship, reverence for his personality was so shot through the intimacy that there was always an element of loneliness visible in him. To the students at the Theological School he was teacher and leader. Many of those men now occupy positions of influence as pastors of great city churches or bishops of important dioceses. Always the stimulating center of any group with which he was associated, his genius dominated. But it was not as a thinker that he made his primary impression. His life was more impressive than his thought. He greatly valued his relation as pastor in the parish with which he was for several years connected. Though this work was always subordinated to his work in the seminary, he was greatly attracted to the life of parish priest. To get the world personalized was his central thought. He knew that this will never be possible till the incubus of poverty is removed. He was therefore a glad participant in the struggle for a truer democracy. As preacher he possessed the rare faculty of carrying conviction. What he said always emanated from experience. His own superb faith was a bridge for many who could not find their way alone."

He was married in 1883, and his widow and six children survive him.

*SAMUEL NEWELL NELSON died at Revere, Mass., February 25, 1893. (See Secretary's Report, No. IV, p. 84.)

*EDGAR HAMILTON NICHOLS died at Paris June 24, 1910. The following notice of him is taken from the Harvard Graduates' Magazine:

"On the morning of Class Day, June 24, friends of our classmate Nichols, who was taking a sabbatical year in Europe after twenty-six consecutive years of teaching boys, received letters from him in the best of health and spirits. He was 'made over anew,' he said; and after a happy year of travel with his wife as far as Greece and the Islands was turning homeward with joyful expectations. The last visits had been made, tickets bought, trunks sent off to London, and he was reading French in the hotel garden at Paris when, on the very day of the receipt of his assuring letters, the stroke fell (apoplexy) — an hour's unconsciousness, without pain, and all was over — a beautiful ending, if it had to come; but 'he should have died hereafter.' Other '78 men have made more brilliant public records, but no other '78 man has been a vital part of more young lives than he, and at the same time done so many other men's work, modestly and uncomplainingly.

"Edgar Hamilton Nichols was born in Saco, Me., December 7, 1856, of sterling New England stock of the missionary type. His mother was Caroline Matilda Tucker. His father, Dr. John Taylor Gilman Nichols, '36, was pastor and pastor emeritus of the Unitarian parish in Saco for fifty-six years. His grandfather, Rev. Ichabod Nichols, 1802, after a fifty years' pastorate of the First Parish in Portland, had removed to 33 Kirkland St., Cambridge, whither in 1872 the grandson came to live with his widowed grandmother and complete his preparation for Harvard at the Cambridge Latin School. He graduated with our class next in rank to Shorey and Vickery, brilliant in mathematics and equally good in classics and in science. After two years' tutoring at Staatsburgh-on-the-Hudson he returned to Cambridge for a Ph.D. in mathematics; but an accident on the ice in November, 1881, compelled surgical operations which endangered his life in 1882. He recovered and in the fall of 1883 joined our classmate Browne in 'The Browne and Nichols School for Boys,' to which he gave the last full measure of his devotion.

"He was one of the original Mugwumps of 1884, a Non-Partisan, and an Anti-Imperialist. He was a member of the Massachusetts Reform Club and served long on its Executive Committee, of the Free Trade League, Colonial Club, Twentieth Century Club, Good Government Association, and the Municipal League. He was a director of the Cambridge Savings Bank. He was active in the Mathematical and Physics Club and in the New England Association of Colleges and Preparatory Schools; one of the organizers and first presidents of the New England Association of Teachers of Mathematics and of the Harvard Teachers' Association, of which he was President in 1905-06. His genius for detail and his practical experience in secondary education were of infinite service to his brother Henry, '77, trustee of the Simmons estate; and he was therefore one of the organizers of Simmons College and served as trustee and clerk of the corporation up to the year he went abroad.

"No church, charity, or committee ever appealed to him in vain. In 1890-93 he was a leader in establishing and maintaining the Triangle Club of the East End Christian Union; he was President of the Parish Club, at least three times chairman of the General Committee of Twelve of the Congregation of the First Parish in Cambridge, and a most active member of the Building Committee. He had a passion for service. He never learned how to say 'no' or to spare himself, for he never thought of himself. And yet, as Dr. Crothers said, 'One would no more think of praising Nichols than of praising Nature.'

"On the day before his sudden death he celebrated with his wife, Julia Webster Abbot, the twenty-sixth anniversary of their marriage. He left no children; but several nephews and nieces will long mourn their favorite uncle, and many grateful schoolboys, whom he ministered to for twenty-six years and who had not ceased to look upon him as a kind and thoughtful father, will miss him as only sons can miss a father. He was one of the most unselfish men that ever lived."

A memorial meeting was held October 23, 1910, at the Parish House of the First Parish in Cambridge, at which addresses were made by Rev. Samuel M. Crothers, G. H. Browne, Henry Lefavour, Paul H. Hanus, James P. Munroe, W. Rodman Peabody, and Charles William Eliot.

WILLIAM JOHN OLIVER writes from York, Pa.: "There is not much to add to what has been written. No deaths, no marriages, no births to record. No books written, and no articles except what was of local interest and published in our own local papers. In April, 1908, I was chosen one of the Commissioners to the (National

I am, at present, Examiner in Theology for Westminster Presbytery, i.e., I am chairman of the Committee and have to do about all that is done in that department. Am also a member of the Committee on Church History, etc.

"The only club I belong to is a purely local one, the York Junto, a gathering of a dozen or so men who are interested in American literature. For this club I have written papers on William E. Channing, Lyman Beecher, Bronson Alcott, 'Emerson as a Transcendentalist,' and lately on Theodore Parker."

HENRY BLANCHARD OSGOOD died at Westborough, Mass., January 29, 1908. (See Secretary's Report, No. VI, p. 73.)

HARRISON GRAY OTIS died at Dublin, Ireland, January 4, 1915. Shortly before leaving this country in 1914 he wrote as follows: "On my return from Europe, where I had spent five years, in 1907 I bought a place on South Street, Needham, and pass my time cultivating the soil and appear in the town reports as a farmer. I have had no new honors thrust upon me. I am an Honorary Life Member of the Boston Athletic Association, member of the Somerset Club and the National Geographic Society. I am in reasonable health for one of my age and hope to return here to Needham, after a few years on the other side of the pond, to pass my declining years on the banks of the Charles."

He was the soul of good fellowship, and his presence added much to the gayety of our class reunions. He leaves a widow and three children.

HENRY DEELEY PAGE died at Boston June 15, 1904. (See Secretary's Report, No. VI, p. 74.)

HERBERT PARKER writes: "Since 1908 I have followed the more or less even way of a practicing lawyer. Occasional addresses have been my only publications.

"I am a member of the Union, St. Botolph, Tavern, and City Clubs of Boston and the Worcester Club and Worcester Country Club of Worcester. Was President of the Massachusetts Bar Association in 1915. I am Trustee of Clark College and Clark University of Worcester, Director of the State Mutual Life Assurance Co. of Worcester, Trustee of the Bromfield School, Harvard, Mass., and Trustee of the Clinton Hospital Association, Clinton, Mass."

Parker has recently enlisted in the Home Guards and is a regular attendant at drill.

JAMES PARKER continues to live in Boston and writes that he has nothing worth mentioning to report.

ROBERT FLETCHER PATTERSON writes from Pittsburgh, Pa.: "In June, 1908, I gave up the professorship of Greek and Latin in the Pittsburgh Central High School, which I had held since 1884. Since then, but within the fated limits, I have been 'doing as I darned please.' "

DANIEL EDWARD PAULLIN died at La Mars, Ia., October 22, 1895. (See Secretary's Report, No. IV, p. 92.)

GEORGE HALSEY PERLEY. In 1910, on the reorganization of the Conservative Party executive in Canada, Perley was made chief whip and was Mr. Borden's chief lieutenant up to the day of dissolution. On the formation of the Borden government on October 10, 1911, he became a member of the Cabinet, as Minister without Portfolio, and during the absence of Mr. Borden from Canada during two summers he acted as Prime Minister. A notice of him in the Canadian Magazine contains the following statement:

“At times he added to the labors of the Prime Minister the headship of four or five other departments, and he evinced a capacity for work which kept the secretaries and higher officials busier than they cared for in the parliamentary recess. Unworried, unhurried, unresting, he kept the machinery of the Government moving smoothly, and saw that there was no blockade in the large functions which our system throws upon the political chiefs of the departments. And for all this he drew no more from the public exchequer than if he were a private member of Parliament. Of course, he did not need it, but it is not every wealthy man, even in Canada, who takes this view of his public obligation.”

After the death of Lord Strathcona he was made High Commissioner for Canada in England, and since that time has been in London in charge of the Canadian interests there and of the welfare of the troops which Canada has sent to the war. He has been knighted and fills the duties of his high position with the ability and success which has characterized all his efforts.

EDWARD EMERSON PHILLIPS, of Marietta College, Ohio, writes under date of 1914: “I still pursue the even tenor not uncommon in a small college. An occasional paper before the Ohio College Association, a trip to Spain and Italy, another to Germany and Holland, have kept me sufficiently amused when not otherwise occupied. This ends thirty years at Marietta.”

WILLIAM MAGRUDER PHILLIPS died in 1907.

JOHN PICKERING still lives in Salem, Mass., and reports nothing new concerning himself.

GEORGE MILLER PINNEY writes: “No public office. No books or articles published. Member of University Club, Richmond County Country Club, Bar Association of the City of New York, New York State Bar Association, and Phi Beta Kappa Society of New York. Member of law firm of Pinney, Thayer & Van Slyke, 32 Nassau St. Engaged in general practice and as trial counsel in any case fit for a court to hear."

WILLIAM HENRY POTTER was appointed consulting oral surgeon on the staff of the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital of Boston in 1916. He writes as follows: "In August, 1909, I attended the Fifth International Dental Congress held at Berlin. I was a delegate representing the State of Massachusetts and Harvard University. At the Congress I presented a paper on 'Oral Hygiene,' which was published in the records of the Congress. At the close of the Congress I made a short journey, including Vienna, Budapest, Ischl, Salzburg, Strassburg, Paris, and London, returning to Boston in time to be present at the inauguration of President Lowell.

"The last of July, 1911, I went abroad again to attend the yearly meeting of the Fédération Dentaire Internationale held in London the first week in August. After this meeting I visited a model school dental clinic in Strassburg and one near Vienna, Austria. Then I attended the International Hygiene Exhibition held in Dresden, and later made a study of local anæsthesia for operations on the teeth and mouth by use of novocaine as practiced in Marburg, Leipzig, and Berlin, Germany. The methods thus studied I introduced at the clinic of the Harvard Dental School. I have also been much interested in the use of nitrous oxide and oxygen for prolonged anæsthesia in mouth operations and have had much to do with the process at the Harvard Dental School. I have given many lectures during the years under consideration upon dental hygiene, treating the relation of the teeth to general health and methods calculated to preserve the teeth against their well-known enemies. These lectures have, for the most part, been given before grammar school children, but have also been given before students of Harvard University, Wellesley College, and other institutions of higher education.

“ I have had much to do with raising money for the new Harvard Dental School, and was one of three who formed the committee for the erection of the present building. In June, 1914, I sailed abroad with my wife and five children, with the plan of taking a prolonged rest from my teaching work and practice and incidentally attending the Sixth International Dental Congress, to be held in London the first week of August. I presented a paper at the Congress upon ‘ Means for Preventing the Incidence of Decay between the Sixth and Twelfth Years.’ The advent of the Great European War broke up the Congress and cut me off from my family, which I had left in Switzerland. After three weeks I was able to return to Switzerland and bring my family to London. I remained in England till the last of November and then went to Paris to join the staff of the Ambulance of the American Hospital at Neuilly. At this hospital, which contained from four to five hundred severely wounded French and English soldiers, I was engaged with four associates in treating fractures of the upper and lower jaws, relieving pain arising from the teeth, and establishing, as far as possible, a condition of mouth hygiene in all patients in the hospital. I came in contact daily with most extensive injuries to the head, involving the oral cavity. The combined work of the dentist and the plastic surgeon transformed many hideous wrecks into quite presentable human beings. The war gave me a very unusual professional experience — one that is as rare as this great war fortunately is.

“ After a three months’ service at the American Ambulance I went via Switzerland to Berlin in order to inspect the fractured jaw clinics and visit the new Imperial Dental School. Later I returned to Paris for a short service at the Ambulance and sailed for home May 8 from Liverpool, the day after the blowing up of the Lusitania. I had the experience of going through the wreckage of that boat off Queenstown.

“ I am a member of the following: Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Odontological Society of Boston, Amer-

ROBERT JOHNSTON HARE POWEL continues to practice law in New York.

GEORGE HYDE PRESTON sends the following from Seattle, Wash.: "In April, 1908, I was living in New York City. I left there in July of that year and returned to Seattle, Wash. In the fall of 1908 I went into the insurance business in Seattle, and I am now in that business. I still continue my short story writing, and stories of mine have appeared from time to time in various magazines. I am a member of the Harvard Club of Seattle and of the Washington Society of the Sons of the Revolution."

GEORGE SHARP RAYMER continues to be Assistant Professor of Mining at Harvard and is also Assistant Professor of Mining at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. ALFRED HARRISON ROGERS writes: "Since the date of the last Class Report I have been engaged in business as usual, but have taken numerous vacations and traveled extensively through the United States and Canada. My present business connections are President and Treasurer of the Southwest Missouri Railroad Co. (operating an electric railroad in southwest Missouri and southeast Kansas), President of the Joplin Globe Publishing Co. (publisher of the Joplin Daily Globe), Vice-President of the Inter-State Grocer Co. (of Joplin — wholesale), Treasurer of the Mt. Hope Cemetery Association, and Director of the Joplin National Bank. That the same person should be president of a public utility corporation and a newspaper company is regarded by many unthinking people as indeed an unholy alliance, but that is only one of the many popular delusions now permeating the American body political. As a member of both fraternities I can say that there is at least as much of integrity, truthfulness, and unselfishness among public service men as exists in the ranks of journalism. About one year ago I bought a country place of some forty acres, near Carthage, Mo., and am trying to develop this up to the standard of attractive though modest country life in New York State and New England, and in this is the controlling motive of my middle age. I have held no public office, but permit me to enter the following claims for distinction among the surviving members of '78: first, have hair on my head; second, have never been 'abroad;' third, am not a grandfather."

BARNEY SACHS writes: "I have continued in the practice of medicine as neurologist and alienist. I have been made corresponding member of the 'Gesellschaft Deutscher Neuroloräerzte,' and corresponding member of the Société de Neurologie, Paris, France. I have published numerous professional (medical) articles. I have been made one of four executors of the estate of Benjamin Altman and a Trustee of the Altman Foundation."

He had occupied a position in the Sub-treasury in New York for over twenty-five years. He was taken ill in the summer of 1911, and in August he gave up work and went away for a month or two, but on his return home he was unable to resume his occupation and became gradually worse, and for the six weeks before his death he was confined to the house. It is a difficult problem. My children are being educated here, and as they grow older are entering business. The oldest is sporting column editor to the Springfield Union, Mass. The next is advertising writer for the New York Telephone Co., New York City. The older girl is musician and librarian at Bloomingdale Hospital, White Plains, N. Y. The next is a sophomore at Syracuse University, the older sister having graduated from Mt. For the last twenty-five years I have most closely devoted myself to the practice of the law; I have endeavored to attain a creditable position in my profession, but whether I have succeeded I must leave to more impartial judges than myself; the law firm with which I am associated is Taggart, Burroughs, Wyman & McLane. FREDERIC WESTON TAYLOR writes: "My life has been the usual one of a general practitioner of medicine, and my interests are such as are naturally connected with it. At present I am senior member and chairman of the Visiting Staff of the Cambridge Hospital, chairman of the Cambridge Commission for certifying milk, and President of the Cambridge Associated Charities. Summer recreation took me to Europe, including the Passion Play at Oberammergau in 1910, and to the Isthmian Canal Zone and Jamaica in 1913."

HENRY OSBORN TAYLOR writes: "The past five years have been the happiest of a pleasant life. Everything has gone well with me. This is the truth, though it frightens me to say it. After ten years' work I brought out 'The Mediæval Mind' (2 vols.) in 1911; second edition, 1914; also a third edition of 'The Classical Heritage of the Middle Ages,' and even a second edition of poor old 'Ancient Ideals.' 'Taylor on Corporations' has died a natural death in its fifth edition. Alma Mater made me a Litt.D. in 1912. I have just been giving a few lectures at Harvard in the Divinity Chapel, of which I did not even suspect the existence in my college days, any more than undergraduates do now. I shall make, D. V., a little book of them as soon as I can invent a title. As for clubs, I belong only to 'The Century,' of which at present I am the Secretary and write the obituaries. Eight of its members who died last year had been officers in the Civil War. It seems to me pleasant to grow old, and the end itself — pregnant."

FREDERICK WINTHROP THAYER. The following is copied from a notice of Fred Thayer which appeared in the Harvard Graduates' Magazine for December, 1913.

Frederick Winthrop Thayer was born at Belmont, Mass., August 14, 1854, and died very suddenly of heart disease at Cohasset on September 17, 1913. He entered college full of energy and enthusiasm, and being of great bodily vigor engaged heartily in athletic sports. Elevated in his sophomore year to the position of Captain of the University nine, he became early in his college career a conspicuous representative of the whole undergraduate body. He continued as captain of the nine during sophomore, junior and senior years, and showed great ability in the handling of his men. Under his leadership the nine was victorious in the series with Yale in each of the three years. The story of his invention of the catcher's mask is thus told by General William A. Bancroft, then captain of the University crew:

"The days when Thayer entered Harvard baseball differed somewhat from the present. A pitcher had to throw underhanded and end his throw with arm stretched out. Then that changed and as a consequence the ball was thrown much more swiftly. Dr. Harold C. Ernst, now a professor in the Medical School, was pitcher on the Varsity nine, and James A. Tyng, the real estate dealer, was catcher. They made a wonderful battery. Thayer noticed that the more freedom given the pitcher the greater became the risk of the catcher. One day he let a few into the secret. He was going to make a mask. A few days before the Yale game of 1876 he came on the field with it. Save for the fact that it was made more heavily, it was much similar to the masks in use to-day. Thayer attached it to Jim Tyng's head, and from that moment the mask entered baseball. At first the players, other than those in the Varsity, and the spectators, were inclined to ridicule it, and it caused no end of comment, when it was worn by Tyng at the Yale game that year. Harvard won, and two years later team after team adopted the mask. As I recall Thayer in those days he was the sort of a man that would have caused a sensation now. He was about five feet nine, weighed about one hundred and fifty, and at first gave no idea of what he really could do. His eyes were his charm. Bright and alert as they looked out from a shock of dark, curly hair they sensed every move in a baseball game. Fred played, directed, and dominated the nine. He said little, but what he said meant much."

Thayer confined himself by no means to baseball, but took part in many other sports and games. He played on the University football team in 1875, which won the game from Yale, and was a frequent contestant in the regular athletic meetings, where he took part in the running, wrestling, jumping, and vaulting contests. In November, 1875, he won the 100-yard dash and the hurdle race. He was a member of the Hasty Pudding Club, A. D. Club, Institute of 1770, and was pater primus of the D. K. E., and Chief Marshal of the class on Class Day. He devoted so much time and thought in his senior year to having the nine of which he had been made the head win, that his studies got neglected and the faculty withheld his degree. This omission of the authorities they handsomely atoned for later, giving him his A.B. in 1887.

On leaving college he went to Omaha and was there for something over a year in the employ of the Burlington & Missouri River Railroad. Returning to Boston in 1880 he entered the wool commission house of Hilton, Weston & Co., which for many years had been one of the leading wool houses in Boston. He subsequently became a partner in the concern, and at the time of his death the name of the firm was Farnsworth, Thayer & Stevenson. He was a member of the Somerset and Exchange Clubs in Boston, the Boston Athletic Association, the Tariff Reform League, and India Wharf Rats, and also a member of the University and Harvard Clubs of New York, and a director of the Harvard Club of Boston. At his death he was a member of the class committee. He was one of the founders and the president of the Varsity Club.

He was married on August 27, 1885, at St. John, New Brunswick, to Miss Mary Thirza Busby, who survives him. He is also survived by his brother, William Roscoe Thayer of Cambridge, editor of the Harvard Graduates' Magazine, and by a sister, Mrs. Francis C. Welch.

Of all the members of the class he was the best beloved. Although the whole university loved and honored him, to the members of his own class he was always true, loyal, and devoted. To him they could always turn for interest and help, knowing they would receive his kind attention and assistance. All the instances of his helpfulness to individuals of the class were known only to himself. So long as he lived he continued to give his time, his thought, and his wise counsel to the object of maintaining in the university a proper and healthy interest in athletic sports. He was the ideal of true manliness. Intense in his application to the accomplishment of what he undertook to do, he did it with all his strength and all his might, irrespective of his ease, his comfort, or his personal advantage. He sacrificed his chance of getting his degree and accepted what must have been at the time a severe personal mortification in having it refused, because he felt that in taking the position of captain of the nine the duty of making that nine victorious was foremost. Such was Fred Thayer, an honor to his class, an honor to the University, an honor to humanity.

NATHANIEL NILES THAYER is still in the cotton business in Boston. He writes: "Nothing of particular interest has happened to me during the last six years. I am in the same business that I have been since I graduated. I am a member of the Exchange Club, the St. Botolph Club, and the senior member of the firm of Barry, Thayer & Co."

CHARLES BAYARD TRAIL died at his residence in Frederick, Md., on December 8, 1914. He was President of the Farmers' & Mechanics' National Bank of Frederick, and one of the most prominent citizens of the town.

He was a descendant of an old Scotch family, and was born in Frederick, February 2, 1857. He was educated in the Frederick College and at Phillips Academy, Andover. After graduating from Harvard in the Class of 1878 he read law under the Hon. M. G. Urner, and was admitted to the bar of Maryland. From 1883 to 1887 he was Secretary of the United States Legation in Brazil. Subsequently he was appointed Consul at Marseilles. In 1894 he returned to Frederick and was made Vice-President of the Farmers' & Mechanics' National Bank, and in 1904 succeeded to the Presidency of that institution. He was a vestryman of All Saints Episcopal Church, a director of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company, the President of the Frederick Female Seminary, and a member of the Board of Visitors of the Maryland School for the Deaf, and took an active interest in that institution. It was recently written of him as follows: "He has been a useful man and a leader in the community; an example of correct living and high character, and enjoys the well-merited respect of the people of the county of which his family has been an integral part for many generations." In 1889 he married Miss Grace Winebrenner, who survives him with five children. One of his sisters married the Rev. John B. Harding of the Class of 1878.

York Society for the Instruction of First Aid to the Injured.

PAUL TUCKERMAN writes: "My occupation for a number of years past has been that of trustee of estates, and during the past ten years the number of trusts of which I have been appointed trustee has increased to such an extent that my time is entirely occupied with them. I am also a Trustee of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. and the New York Life Insurance and Trust Co., and a member of the Board of Governors of the following institutions: New York Hospital, Minturn Hospital, Institution for the Education of the Blind, New York Society Library, and the American Geographical Society. I am a member of the Tuxedo Club, Union Club, Knickerbocker Club, Down Town Association, and on the Board of Governors of the first and the last of these. My home for the greater part of the year is at Tuxedo, N. Y., where I am a member of the Board of Education, a Director of the Tuxedo Stores Co., and a member of the Republican Town Committee."

In 1916 he was Vice-President of the American Geographical Society and Treasurer of the New York Hospital.

JAMES ARTHUR TUFTS writes: "In 1905 I was given leave of absence for nine months on full salary. I went to the Legislature for three months and spent about four months in Europe. In 1907 I went to the Legislature again. Since then I have kept at work. I have made some 'addresses' on educational and other subjects, have been President of the New England Association of English Teachers (of which George H. Browne is the father), and Vice-President of the New England Federation of Harvard Clubs. I am a Trustee of the New Hampshire College of Agriculture and Liberal Arts. I had the honor to represent Harvard College at the dedication of the Tuck monument at the Isles of Shoals. In 1913 the students of the Phillips Exeter Academy, where I have taught since 1878, presented me with a beautiful silver loving cup 'in grateful appreciation of distinguished loyalty and devotion.' Older friends thought it was time I was done in oil. Mrs. Tufts will be glad to show the portrait to any and all of my classmates."

HERMAN FRANK VICKERY continues to practice the medical profession at Boston. In August, 1915, he married Anna Louisa (Bigelow) Howe at Boston. He is Visiting Physician at the Massachusetts General Hospital, Consulting Physician of the Plymouth, Quincy, and Attleboro Hospitals, Instructor in Medicine at the Harvard Medical School, Joint Editor with P. C. Knapp of the American edition of Strümpell's "Practice of Medicine," Associate Editor of Sajous' Medical Annual, Chairman of the Medical Section of the Suffolk District Medical Society, Director of the Boston Nurses' Club and of the Health Education League, and a member of the following organizations: University Club, Union Boat Club, Massachusetts Medical Society, of which he is a Councillor, American Medical Association, Association of American Physicians, Boston Society for Medical Observation, Boston Medical Association, Boston Society for Medical Improvement, Boston Association for Relief of Tuberculosis, and the Boston Society of Medical Science.

CHARLES HENRY VINTON writes that he is not as young as he used to be, otherwise sends no especial information. He makes his home in New York.

HENRY PRINCE WARDEN continues to live at Antrim, N. H. He says, "No change! Just living in the country."

BENJAMIN WELLES writes: "Since the death of my wife I have passed the summers at my country place at Islip, Long Island, the winters in New York when not abroad. I have acted as Executor and Trustee of several estates and have been interested in a number of charitable institutions. Among the clubs of which I am a member are the Union, University, and Harvard. My daughter, the wife of Harry Pelham Robbins, has given me a granddaughter. My son graduated at Harvard in 1914, having taken the course in three years. He expects to study architecture at the Beaux Arts in Paris."

HENRY WHEELER still continues to practice law as a member of the firm of Hutchins & Wheeler at Boston. He was for several years a member of the Committee on Judicial Appointments of the Massachusetts Bar Association, is a member of the Board of Managers of the Children's Hospital, a Trustee of the Massachusetts Bible Society, has been a director in two manufacturing corporations, is a vestryman of King's Chapel, a member of the Union and Harvard Clubs of Boston and of the Eastern Yacht Club.

JOSEPH CUTLER WHITNEY was born at Boston, December 7, 1856, the son of Henry Austin Whitney and Fanny Lawrence Whitney. He was fitted for college at private schools in Boston and by the late Professor George Martin Lane as private tutor. After graduation he engaged in the wool business at Boston, first with the firm of Harding, Gray & Dewey, and afterwards with Harding, Martin & Co., and then became a partner in the firm of George B. Drake & Co., a firm also engaged in the wool business. During the period from 1878 to 1886 he made several trips through the West in the wool-growing parts of the country, and in November, 1886, retired from business, and from that time up to the time of his death was engaged in the care of trust property. His home was in Milton, Mass., and he had a winter residence in Boston. He took great interest in Milton town affairs, was Trustee of the Milton Public Library, and occupied several of the town offices. He prepared a memoir of his father, which was published in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register of July, 1891. In 1904 he wrote a biography of John Homans, which was printed in the supplement to the April number of the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, on page 76. His intense interest in his duties as Class Secretary, and in all that concerned the members of the class is well known to all of us. In the spring of 1910 he suffered a paralytic shock from which he never fully recovered. He died at his home in Milton, July 18, 1911. He was married, in 1882, to Georgiana Hayward, who, with three sons, Henry Lawrence, George Hayward, and Robert Upton, survive him.

CHARLES KILBORN WILLIAMS continues in the practice of law at Sioux City, Ia. He sends no news of himself.

HENRY AUSTIN WOOD is still practicing medicine at Waltham, Mass. He sends no particulars.

ALFRED WORCESTER writes: "With the exception of a year in California (November, 1912, to September, 1913), taking care of my uncle in his last sickness, I have been at work as a family physician in Watertown, Waltham, and adjoining towns, which means nowadays attempting all branches of the science of medicine without sufficient knowledge or skill in any one branch. I have continued my especial interest in the art of nursing; but in trying to educate and train nurses to be real helpers in the family of the patient, by training them in home nursing for home nursing, I have drawn upon myself and the Waltham school the bitter opposition of the leading hospital school nurses.

"Besides occasional papers in medical journals, Houghton Mifflin Co. have just published for me 'Nurses for our Neighbors.'"

GILBERT MONTALAND YATES reports himself as still living in Minneapolis, but gives no details.

THEODORE TRIPP YOUNG writes: "Since 1909 I have been Superintendent of Schools in Saco. The yearly work of Superintendent occupies my time, and nothing remarkable seems to come into my life. As we grow older the duties of life seem to increase, and we can do less and less as we like on account of those duties."

BACHELORS OF SCIENCE

EDWARD HAMILTON SQUIBB sends the following account of himself: "I was born on September 30, 1853, at the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Naval Hospital, while my father was surgeon in the United States navy. My father comes directly from the old Quaker stock and faith as found at his birthplace, Wilmington, Del., of which I find I have inherited much in principles and bearing. We learn from sources abroad that our ancestors were originally French and the name was Esquippe. They migrated to Ireland and from there to England, where they spread over considerable territory. Our branch appears, from the present tombstone records and those English Squibbs now living, to have located in Derbyshire.

"Even at eight years of age, and before my first school days — early in the Civil War time — being much of the time with my father (then being the first son) I became interested in medicines and medical supplies, then being supplied from a laboratory started by him at the request of the Surgeon General of the army (father having previously resigned from the navy). I was soon given many simple tasks which a boy at that age might easily perform, and my preference and interest for medical topics and for hearing about the action of drugs on the animal economy thus began quite early.

"My primary education began in one or more of the Brooklyn private schools until the middle '60s, when I entered the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, where I took a combined classical and scientific course, finally graduating in 1874. My ambition continuing for the study of medicine, I was sent to the University of Virginia, at Charlottesville, to confine my studies to the four languages, Greek, Latin, French, and German, as being deemed a necessary equipment for professional terminology and collateral reading. I made some very close friends there, even though the close of the war had not been much over ten years. Among other things one contributing circumstance served to bring me closer to them. Finding the University entirely deficient in any provision for general physical development, I persuaded the authorities to assign a then unused mess hall, in which I set up a dozen or more pieces of simple apparatus I personally had shipped from New York. I succeeded in interesting quite a group of students in regular work, which I needed fully as much as any of them. This very modest 'Gymnasium' was kept up after I left there with sufficient increased zeal to finally interest outside capital, by which was built the now large and finely equipped Fayerweather Gymnasium. In looking back to that time, and after a recent visit to the University, I take considerable satisfaction in having assumed the initiative in waking up a dormant body of students having wishes but not opportunities, which has now become a very large and active organization devoted to all athletic interests there.

"From that University I then presented myself with my credentials of previous studies to Dean Eustis of the Lawrence Scientific School, for entrance there. After an examination, principally oral, I was entered advanced in the then prescribed Natural History Course, as being the appropriate one for those to take who intend to study medicine. In the prescribed as well as the elective studies of this course I was thrown with students of other classes in the college taking those same studies, and thus I came to know quite a proportion of '78 men and studied closely with some.

"I kept up my previous regular and systematic physical exercise by the use, in like manner, of the apparatus in the old Gymnasium, and retained my interest and continued to work in the new Hemenway Gymnasium when opened under the newly appointed Director, Dr. Dudley Sargent, until my final departure from the University. Dr. Sargent was one of the early advocates of systematic and periodical physical measurements of groups of men, and particularly college students, which has now become quite universal, and I have the honor of being one of the first group he measured in the new Gymnasium, whereby he was enabled to prescribe specific pieces of apparatus to strengthen particular deficient muscles in order to bring one up to a better physical balance.

“Now that war talk is quite universal and military preparation even among college students is being so successfully supported, it may be of interest to recall to mind that in our day there existed an organization called the Harvard Rifle Corps, recognized by the State and by the College. I was a member of this Corps and gained much in the training of the military rudiments and manual tactics, reaching the rank of First Sergeant. C. W. Bradley, '80, was our Captain, and Gen. F. W. Lister, Superintendent of the old Gymnasium, assisted, and was custodian of the rifles apportioned to the Corps by the State, stored in special racks in the old Gymnasium (now the Germanic Museum). We were very proud of the recognition accorded us by the State, early in the spring of 1878, when it assigned new rifles to the Corps. The drilling was done on Memorial Delta, Holmes' Field, and at times on the Cambridge streets. There were enough students interested then to form two companies. President Eliot and other college officials would occasionally witness the drilling. We were told that we were the only military body having authority and jurisdiction in the College Yard.

“After graduation, the next two years were spent in the Harvard Medical School — then a three years' course — taking therapeutics in advance. Needing, for my future vocational work, more of this latter subject with larger hospital and research opportunities than then available in Boston, I entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York the next year and there took my medical degree. Father soon made it quite evident to me that my future was not in the private practice of medicine, but in the study of medicines and their actions. So I grew up with him in that department of medicine. I kept up my medical reading and connection with medical societies, and am still studying and interested in therapeutics and research work. For several years I was joint editor with father in his 'Ephemeris of Materia Medica, Pharmacy and Therapeutics,' and after his death sole editor. I was chairman of the Committee on Therapeutics for the Eighth Decennial Revision of the United States Pharmacopœia of 1900. I am a Resident Fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine, a member of the Associated Physicians of Long Island and the Brooklyn Medical Association, Treasurer of the New York Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans of Medical Men, a Director of the New York Physicians' Mutual Aid Association, a member of the New York Academy of Sciences, American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, and the New York Zoölogical Society.

"My clubs are the Century, Harvard (New York), Harvard (Boston), one of the Vice-Presidents of the Long Island Harvard Club, and the Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn.

"I am a stockholder and one of the Board of Directors of E. R. Squibb & Sons."

JAMES HERVEY STEBBINS, JR., was born at Brooklyn, N. Y., June 4, 1857. He writes as follows: "After graduating from the Lawrence Scientific School in 1878 I entered the University of Berlin, and studied organic chemistry with Professor A. W. Hoffman for two semesters, and then entered the University of the Sorbonne, Paris, where I studied inorganic chemistry in the laboratory of Professor Schutzenberger, and attended the lectures of Professor Troost in organic chemistry for two years. In 1881 I became Chemist to the Municipal Gas Light Co. of New York, which position I filled for one year. In 1882 I opened a private laboratory for analytical and consulting work at 66 Beaver St., New York, and the following year moved to 114 Pearl St., New York, where I continued to do business until 1903. During these eleven years I did a general analytical and consulting business, and was retained as special adviser in chemical matters by several firms, and also acted as expert in numerous patent cases before the courts, as well as criminal cases. I had made a specialty of coal-tar products and aniline dyes, and was fortunate enough to secure some twenty-two patents on products of this kind. In the fall of 1903 I sold out my downtown business, and moved uptown, where I opened a laboratory at 351 Fourth Avenue, New York, where I again devoted myself to analytical chemistry, but made a specialty of pathological work, including bacteriology, and did in addition quite a lot of photomicrographic work for physicians, etc. In 1906 I moved my laboratory to 3 West 29th St., where I did the same kind of work for three years. In 1909 I removed my laboratory to my present quarters in the Chemists Building, 50 East 41st St., New York, where, as usual, I am devoting myself to analytical and consulting chemistry and pathology. I have been Pathologist of the Peoples' Hospital for the past five years, and have also quite an extensive practice in this line among physicians and surgeons."

JOSEPH MARTIN WILSON is Chemist and Assistant Inspector of Engineering Materials in the United States Navy. At the time he sent his report he was stationed at the works of the Bethlehem Steel Co., at South Bethlehem, Pa., where he has been since 1897. He is a member of the American Chemical Society, the Harvard Chemists Club, and the American Institute of Metals. His occupations have been as follows: "In 1880-81 he was Special Agent of the Tenth Census in the Department of Mining and Quarrying for New England; in 1881-84 he was Assistant Foreman and Chemist of the Otis Steel Co. of Cleveland, O.; in 1884 he was Assistant Chemist of the Joliet Steel Co. of Joliet, Ill.; in 1885-86 he was Assistant Chemist of the North Chicago Rolling Mill Co.; in 1886-96 he was Chemist and Metallurgist of the Laughlin & Junction Steel Co. at Mingo Junction, O.; and in 1897 was appointed Chemist and Assistant Inspector of Engineering Materials in the United States Navy. Between 1886 and 1896 he published the following articles which appeared in the Proceedings of the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania: "Methods of Analysis of Iron and Steel in Use at Laboratory of Laughlin & Junction Steel Co.;" "Note on Analysis of Ferro Manganese;" "Analysis of Furnace Cinders." In May, 1905, he read a paper before the Lehigh Valley Section of the American Chemical Society on "Analysis of Alloys of Copper," which was published in The Chemical Engineer of July, 1905, Vol. II, pp. 144-145.

WILLIAM POWELL WILSON sends no report. The Harvard Directory gives his address as 34th St., below Spruce, Philadelphia, Pa.

LEMUEL FOX WOODWARD was born at Worcester, Mass., April 26, 1857. He writes as follows: "I attended the public schools in Worcester, Mass., including three years in the Worcester High School. Entered the Lawrence Scientific School in 1875; graduated in 1878. Entered Harvard Medical School and completed my three years in 1881. Because of the hospital regulations I did not take my degree until 1882. July, 1881, I was appointed Interne at the Boston City Hospital, where I spent eighteen months. Graduated from there in January, 1883. Received appointment at the Boston Lying-In Hospital, but after six weeks' service was obliged to come home on account of my father's illness. I began general practice at Worcester, Mass., in June, 1883. Received an appointment to the Washburn Dispensary as Orthopedist in 1884. On completion of the Memorial Hospital I was appointed on the staff in 1888 — first in the children's department and afterwards in the surgical department. At present I am Chief of Staff at Memorial Hospital. In 1890 I was appointed one of two surgeons to open the New Out-patient Department at the Worcester City Hospital, and served in the Out-patient Department until 1893, when I was appointed Surgeon. Have held the position as Surgeon in the Worcester City Hospital since that time. I began as a general practitioner, but for the last ten years have specialized in surgery. I was City Physician and Chairman of the Board of Health from 1883 to 1893. I am President of the Worcester Natural History Society; Past President of the Worcester District Medical Society; Councillor of the Massachusetts Medical Society; Past President of the Boston City Hospital Alumni Society; Fellow of the American Medical Association; and of the American College of Surgeons; Consulting Surgeon of the Baldwinville Hospitals. I am also a member of the following clubs: Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Club of Worcester, the Worcester Club, Quinsigamond Boat Club, Tatnuck Country Club, and the Worcester Automobile Club."

TEMPORARY MEMBERS

HARRISON OTIS APTHORP died at Milton, Mass., August 6, 1905. (See Secretary's Report, No. VI, p. 107.)

WILLIAM HERBERT ATKINSON sends no report.

FRANCIS GILBERT ATTWOOD died at Jamaica Plain, Mass., April 30, 1900. (See Secretary's Report, No. IV, p. 128.)

HENRY WILLARD AUSTIN, who was with the class for a part of the freshman year, died at the Massachusetts General Hospital, in Boston, October 16, 1912, after an illness of several months. He was the son of Arthur W. Austin, who was at one time collector of the port of Boston. He prepared for college at a private school in Southborough, and leaving college in his sophomore year he spent several years in travel, visiting the Orient and Australia. He published some time ago a volume of poems entitled "Vagabond Verses;" and about twenty-five years ago, being interested in the nationalist movement, he wrote "The Story of Government" and a "History of Tammany." He also started a magazine under the name of The Nationalist, which afterwards merged in a magazine which Edward Bellamy published for a couple of years. He is survived by a widow and a son.

CHARLES CHESTER BOLTON of Cleveland, Ohio, entered college in 1873 with the class of 1877, but was obliged to give up work for a time on account of trouble with his eyes. He was with our class in our sophomore year, and received the degree of A.B. in 1907 as of the class of 1877. He was formerly in the iron and steel business, but has now retired.

*NICHOLAS PENNIMAN BOND died June 21, 1915.

FRANK BRAINERD entered college in the class of 1877, and joined our class in the sophomore year. He received the degree of A.B. as of 1877 in 1907.

*CHARLES RICHARD BRIGGS died September 14, 1915.

*DANIEL GALLUP BRIGGS died January 27, 1880. (See Secretary's Report, No. II, p. 91.)

LINCOLN FORBES BRIGHAM is living at Chestnut Hill, Mass.

MIDDLETON SHOOLBRED BURRILL is living in New York. He took his A.B. degree in 1879.

JAMES EDWARD PERRY BUTTS writes: "Have been note Teller of the Geneva National Bank for twenty-four years and am still in the same bank. I can say but little about my life, as it is about the same day after day, as is usual with one who occupies the position I do and lives in such a quiet city as Geneva. I regret to see that my old schoolmate, Joseph C. Whitney, has joined the great majority; a good fellow, and one I was very fond of."

He is a member of the Society of the Cincinnati.

CHARLES HENRY CHAPMAN sends no report.

*CHARLES EDWARD CHICKERING died at Boston, January 20, 1875. (See Secretary's Report, No. II, p. 92.)

CHARLES EDWARD CROSS sends no report.

*HARRISON DUNHAM died in Boston, June 13, 1914. He was with our class in the freshman year, then went to the University of Oxford, and also studied in Germany. He was admitted to the bar in Boston in 1881, and practiced there until his death. He was married twice, and left two daughters and a son.

JAMES HERBERT DWINELL writes: "The most important events of my life since the last Report are the births of four grandchildren: one boy and two girls — Frederick Manley Ives, Jr., Alice Cramer Ives, and Eleanor Dwinell Ives, children of my daughter, and James Fisher Dwinell, Jr., son of my son James Fisher Dwinell, H. '02, who was married to Florence Wiley Smith at Lancaster, Pa., in 1908. At the time of the last Report I was serving my first year as one of the Selectmen of Winchester. I was reëlected in 1908 and 1909, and was chairman of the board in both the latter years. Since then I have neither sought nor had political honors thrust upon me. While I call myself 'Manufacturer,' I am on the inactive list. I still hold the positions of Vice-President and Director of Dwinell Wright Co., 311 Summer St., Boston."

HAROLD BAYARD EATON reports: "The last item in the Class Report of 1908 is wholly wrong. I do not know the firm of Eaton & Eustis, nor have I ever lived in Melrose Highlands.

"In 1903 I was sent to several European countries by the United Shoe Machinery Company, and in November of that year I became permanently connected with the Frankfort-on-the-Main branch of this company. There I remained until the fall of 1914, when, not believing all I had heard in Germany of the cause of the present war, I went to England to investigate the English side of the story. On my return to Germany in November, having been denounced as a spy, because I had been in England, I preferred migrating to the eventual possibility of becoming interned. I am now engaged in the buying and selling of European Old and Modern Masters. My elder daughter was graduated from the Paris Sor-bonne in 1911. My younger daughter was married in August, 1912, to Charles Morley, Jr., of London, England. My son, who studied medicine in Giessen, Frankfurt, and Munich, was graduated in June, 1915, from the Harvard Medical School. He has charge of the Nerve Clinic in the Boston Dispensary, and is also connected with the Neurological Department of the Massachusetts General Hospital."

ALFRED ELA writes that he has been alone in business since 1882, that he has published many short articles, but not of late years over his own name.

GEORGE ESTIUS EMERSON writes from Haverhill, Mass., as follows: "It seems to me the older we grow the more reluctant we are about saying anything about ourselves or family; and as I was in college less than a year and a half, I did not become very intimate with any of the boys. However, having for some unknown reason been put in the advanced Greek and Latin section in Freshman year I had the honor and pleasure of seeing and knowing to some extent a bunch of fellows whose ability and worth even then foretold a brilliant future. But, after the mid-year examinations, what I considered then a disaster, but what proved later great good fortune, I landed in a Greek section under John Williams White. He was a real man as well as professor. I always recall with much satisfaction and pleasure my short period of study under his guidance and assistance. Since 1908 I have been busy in a humble way on my farm, have given two of my children a college education, and hope to do the same for the other one. In short, I am trying to lead the contented life that Cato praised and prized so highly, and the simple one close to nature of which Virgil sang so charmingly."

LINCOLN LEAR EYRE. The Secretary has no report of him.

*CHARLES EVERETT FISH died very suddenly, October 23, 1916. Before his death he wrote: "Since April, 1908, I have continued to reside at 85 Friend St. (opposite the Whittier Home) in Amesbury, and am still Superintendent of Public Schools. No deaths have occurred in my family, but I now have six grandchildren — of whom two boys are in school in Watertown, Conn., and one girl in school at Manchester, Mass."

The following is from a notice of his death addressed to his classmates at Phillips Andover Academy by Rufus B. Tobey:

"Fish, while in the act of introducing a speaker at a meeting called in the interests of the State Board of University Extension, was stricken with cerebral hemorrhage and died in a very few minutes.

"He began teaching at the early age of fourteen, winning a position in competition with college students who sought employment as teachers on Cape Cod during the long winter college vacation, and he was a teacher throughout his life. Born at Cotuit, March 26, 1854, his precocity attracted the attention of the wealthy summer residents, who encouraged him to prepare himself for the largest work possible along pedagogical lines. He came to Phillips with no flourish of trumpets, but quickly and easily took the highest rank in the class, and when graduated was valedictorian. His development during his course at Andover was a constant source of surprise, the climax of which was his conquest of both the Draper and Means prizes during his middle year. Fish spent the freshman year in Harvard; then taught for a few years, returning to Cambridge, and was graduated in the same class with ex-President Roosevelt. Passing over his work as the head of several private schools, his most conspicuous position was as principal of Phillips Exeter for five years. The Academy was then in a transition stage, and one hazards nothing in the statement that the successor of Fish was the better able to carry on the work because of what Fish accomplished under trying circumstances. But our classmate found himself when he assumed the duties of Superintendent of Schools. For ten years he served in that capacity in Amesbury, where he resided, as the center, retiring only when the statute of limitation made it imperative. But the account of the Amesbury School Board at its meeting the day following the death of Fish speaks for itself: 'It was voted to close the schools Thursday afternoon when the funeral takes place, and to keep the flags at half mast on the school buildings until after the funeral. It was arranged that all members of the school board who served on the board while Mr. Fish was Superintendent attend the funeral in a body and send a floral tribute.' "

HENRY FRANK. The Secretary has no report concerning him.

HENRY GOLDMAN says that he has been steadily engaged in the banking business as a senior partner of Goldman, Sachs & Co. He is a member of the Harmonic Club and the Criterion Club, and a director of the following corporations: Lawyers Title Insurance & Trust Co., Columbia Knickerbocker Trust Co., United Cigar Manufacturers Co., Sears, Roebuck & Co., May Department Stores Co., Underwood Typewriter Co., Studebaker Corporation, Cluett, Peabody & Co., Inc., Brown Shoe Co., Continental Can Co., National Cloak & Suit Co., and the B. G. Goodrich Co. He further says, "My first grandchild born to my daughter Florence, November 30, 1912."

ALBERT BREWER GUPTILL writes from Fargo, N. D., as follows: "From April, 1908, to January 1, 1913, engaged in looking after road-tax matters pertaining to annual assessments against property of the Northern Pacific Railway Company. From February 1, 1913, to January 1, 1915, managed and operated large gravel-pit enterprise on line of above railway. June 4, 1915, appointed to bench of the Juvenile Court, Third Judicial District, North Dakota, embracing the counties of Cass, Steele, and Traill."

GEORGE WALLINGFORD HILLS sends no report.

FRANCIS AUGUSTINE HOUSTON writes: "No change in business life except that from Vice-President and General Manager to Vice-President and Treasurer of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Co., as of May, 1913. I have laid down the only public office I ever held — member of the School Committee in Concord — for some fifteen years. Have written nothing for publication. My clubs are the Social Circle in Concord, the Concord Country Club, Concord Canoe Club, Union Club of Boston, Harvard Club of Boston, Eastern Yacht Club, The Economic Club, Boston Chamber of Commerce, and Harvard Club of New York. By virtue of my long service with the telephone interests I am a member of the 'Telephone Pioneers of America,' an association organized about four years ago."

AUGUSTUS DROMEL IASIGI died at Norfolk, Va., November 18, 1903. (See Secretary's Report, No. V, p. 57, and Report, No. VI, p. 116.)

EDMUND JANES JAMES, President of the University of Illinois, writes as follows in 1914: "Have done nothing since April, 1908, except rattle around in a big and difficult position to the satisfaction of no one in particular, least of all to myself. I made a trip to Europe, June 24 to September 19, 1908, for the purpose of examining and reporting upon certain educational institutions there. I went again November 11, 1911, to February 22, 1912, to take a rest and study how they ran universities in Germany. Otherwise I have stuck closely to my desk, trying to persuade the Illinois Legislature to increase the appropriation for the University of Illinois, and planning with my colleagues how to spend the money when we got it. I am closing my tenth year at Illinois. The legislative grant for the present biennium is $4,500,000, just three times as much as ten years ago. It represents an annual income of five per cent on a capital endowment of $45,000,000, the increase alone amounting to $30,000,000 in the ten years, or an increase of $3,000,000 per-year. No other institution in the country has had such an increase in endowment in the same time. The people of Illinois certainly have finally 'got a move on them' in the support of a State university. If we only had the wisdom and courage necessary to make the best use of the money! One of my sons, Anthony J., has become a Lieutenant in the Navy and is now Flag Lieutenant to Admiral Howard of the Pacific Squadron; the other, Herman Gerlach, is Adjunct Professor of Government and Politics in the State University of Texas, so that we are widely extended over the country. I still remember the brief period spent with '78 as one of the most profitable and enjoyable portions of my life. It is to me a source of keen delight that my Alma Mater took me again to her loving bosom after thirty-four years of absence and covered my 'balding' head with a doctor's cap — she, so clearly the first of American Universities that there is no second! the enumeration beginning with three. We are surely to be congratulated that we are sons of such a mother! Nothing else has happened to me of note in these years, for as becomes my age I am drawing in my horns, not extending them in these times.

WEBSTER KELLEY is living in Boston, an invalid, and sends no report.

FRANK IRVING KENDALL. E. F. Johnson says that Kendall is still living in San Diego, Cal., happy and prosperous. He told Johnson to extend an invitation to any '78 man visiting San Diego to hunt him up and give him an opportunity to extend a Harvard-California welcome to him. Johnson also sends the following extracts from a recent letter of Kendall's:

"When I telegraphed you and reported six sons and daughters-in-law, I forced my hand a little, but arrangements had been made to complete the half dozen and the plans were successfully carried out yesterday, as shown in the enclosed clipping. I am now the proud patriarch of a tribe, 26 altogether up to the present, with chances that the number will increase, like Catiline's army, regularly and systematically, as all the young men are vigorous and the women responsive. . . .

"We are still living in the same house as when you visited us, and as you know the size of the establishment, you can imagine how the pair of us will rattle like two peas in a pot — or how, at least, we would rattle were it not for the fact that we have both put on weight with age and are well padded to meet the bumps. But it is certain to be very lonesome after the activities of bringing up such a family as mine. Of course we have the grand-kiddies, but they are diversions only and do not fill the bill as a steady occupation. I am plodding along as usual, as I still have the bear by the tail and cannot let go, but I am taking it rather easy and putting most of the work over on to the younger partner and the office force. We are all of the best of health and enjoying life to the utmost. Business in general is very quiet on the coast. We have enjoyed none of the manufacturing activities that have helped the East so much since the war began, and are on the contrary even more quiet than before with the added disadvantage of the higher living cost. . . . My sons Joe and Stewart have made application for reserve officers and are working hard for their examinations."

FREDERIC CLEVELAND KENT died at New York, December, 1884. (See Secretary's Report, No. II, p. 103.)

WILLIAM MURRAY LE MOYNE, lawyer, of Chicago, writes that he is President of the Park Fire Proof Storage Co., and a member of the University Club of Chicago.

EDWARD OLIVER LORD. The Secretary has no report from him.

CHARLES JEREMIAH MASON writes as follows: "You remember, I hope, that I was not 'dropped out' of '78. I had to stop for about a year. So I fell back into '79 of my own free will. Thanks to the late Andrew Peabody, D.D. (whom we all remember with reverence), I did not lose two years. He induced the Faculty to let me take special examinations (one with dear old Professor Sophocles!) so that I could go on (when I returned from Europe) with '79.

"I entered upon my duties as Rector of Calvary Church, Stonington, Conn., on May 1, 1906, and I have been here ever since that date. There is nothing special to report. We have kept on the even tenor of our way. Save for my regular sermon work, and occasional papers read before clerical associations, with now and then a short poem published in some magazine or paper, I have done nothing startling in the literary line. Every year, almost, since we have been in this neighborhood, some of the family, and generally I myself, have taken in the Harvard-Yale boat race; showing the proper 'graduate spirit.' But my near residence to New London, and my presence (then and on various other occasions) on the Thames have not yet 'set that river on fire'! I have kept going very well, in spite of one or two rather severe illnesses, during the past few years. Of course, with a family fast growing up, 'paterfamilias' is always eligible for the 'Back Number Series.' "

JOSEPH MEINRATH, merchandise broker of Kansas City, Mo., was recovering from a long illness when the circulars for this report were sent out.

ISAAC BONNEY MILLS writes: "Have been employed at Boston City Hospital since above date (April, 1908), practically as Auditor. My title or designation is: General Supervisor of Medical and Surgical Supplies.

Within a year or two I have followed the advice of Senator Lodge as a remedy for the high cost of living and have purchased a farm of nine acres — five miles out — where cabbages and other succulent vegetables can be raised, provided you will get up at four o'clock in the morning. I must confess that as a means of livelihood the probability is I would starve if I depended on farming alone. Ralph Waldo Emerson says in one of his essays a man should have within himself all the means of self-support — and I think I have struck the trail. I sometimes think I have just begun to live. Contact with nature seems to have a recuperative effect and exercises a mellowing influence hard to describe in words. Even the sight of a huge wood pile does not alarm me, and the example of George Washington I have been permitted to follow by chopping down a tree now and then. This was also a favorite pastime of Mr. Gladstone, so there is hope yet of having greatness thrust upon me even if I am unable to achieve it. I wish the class long life and happiness. As years go by, I often recall the opening of Cicero's essay 'de senectute,' and hope it may be said of me, 'Haud magna cum re, sed plenus fidei.' "

EDWIN DAY SIBLEY writes: "I have been practicing law in the City of Boston since 1882, when I was admitted to the Bar, and have been located at 89 State St., Boston, prior to April, 1898. Have held no public offices except Registrar of Voters in Somerville, a position of great interest and small pay. As far as positions of trust are concerned, all of my clients have trusted me up to the present time, some perhaps with more or less misgivings, although I have robbed none of them to date, and am too old to begin now. I have published no books or articles. I am a member of King Solomon's Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, Somerville Royal Arch Chapter of Somerville, Central Club of Somerville, Boston Author's Club, Boston, Sons of the American Revolution. I have been connected with no business firms or corporations except as clerk of a dozen or more, and temporary director. Like all the rest of the class, I am growing older each day, and there is less road to be traveled before me than that which I have traveled, and which is behind me. Nothing important has happened in my life; no great wealth has been thrust upon me, nor have I seen any opportunity to grab more than a limited amount as wealth passed by. Still, as I look back over fifty-seven years, so far as life is concerned, I have had my share of good times, I congratulate myself on the fact that I probably have not had the average share of bad times, and as Roosevelt says, I feel that up to the present time I am 'ahead of the game.' "

HENRY SIGOURNEY died at Boston March 9, 1908. (See Secretary's Report, No. VI, p. 126.)

SAMUEL ELLSWORTH SOMERBY died in Boston, June 19, 1890. (See Secretary's Report, No. III, p. 171.)

EDMUND CRAWLEY SPINNEY, who was connected with the class for a part of the senior year, died in Chicago on December 30, 1915, after a brief illness. He was born at Wilmot, Nova Scotia, March 27, 1845, and graduated at Acadia University. He had been pastor of the First Baptist Church in Burlington, Ia., and President of the Burlington College. He was also at one time Secretary and Manager of the Home Savings & Trust Co. of Des Moines. He afterwards moved to Chicago, where for some time he was President of the Bankers Union and the Union Life Insurance Co., and a Director in the Hebrew School. He was Superintendent of the Sunday School of the First Baptist Church of Chicago for four years, and was deeply interested in the Raymond Mission maintained by that church in the stockyards district, where he took charge of the Sunday evening services and contributed largely and generously to its support. He had received the degree of D.D. from the Central University of Iowa. In 1872 he married Josephine S. Chase at Charlestown, Mass., who, with two daughters, survives him.

EDWARD STACKPOLE lives at Lexington, Mass. He is an invalid.

THEODORE FISKE STIMPSON died at Boston October 19, 1875. (See Secretary's Report, No. II, p. 121.)

ROBERT TALLANT died in 1884. (See Secretary's Report, No. III, p. 172.)

HERBERT TAPPAN has died since the last Report was issued, but the Secretary does not know the date or place of his death.

WILLIAM FITZGERALD TOWNE sends no report.

JOHN WALTER WELLS died at Woodbury, N. J., November 9, 1892. (See Secretary's Report, No. IV, p. 164.)

JAMES ALLEN WETHERBEE writes from Fairbanks, Alaska, as follows: "Since 1908 I have still been at the carpentering trade. Of late I have been dropping that and have been raising chickens for a livelihood. By the enclosed booklet you will see that I am in a most delightful place, and expect to live out my days here. It is the best climate I ever got into. Babies don't die here, and all children are husky and lots of them."

BERNARD WIESENFELD writes from Baltimore that he has retired from law practice.

CHARLES HENRY WISWELL is still teaching at the Noble & Greenough School in Boston.

STEPHEN BLAKE WOOD died at Westborough, Mass., December 31, 1906. (See Secretary's Report, No. VI, p. 131.)
